THE ANNUNCIATION OF SAINT MARY.

[Jesus came into the world in order that his divine] nature might be manifested, and that sin might be eradicated ; and the doom of Eve's infelicity, which was denounced against her (that she should bring forth her children in pain and in sorrow) was reversed when Mary brought forth the Lord with rejoicing. Eve conceived through carnal lust, Mary in her womb conceived the merciful and the innocent Christ. Eve bare tears in her womb, Mary brought forth through herself the everlasting joy for all the world. Eve brought forth her child in pain because she had conceived in sin. The Holy Ghost sowed the pure seed in the undefiled womb (of Mary), wherefore she, being a virgin became a mother, because, being a virgin, she had conceived. Each of these circumstances was miraculous, both that she had conceived without defilement, and that in child-bearing she continued ever immaculate. Gabriel was the messenger of these nuptials. What spake he to her, or what heard she when he spake ? 'Hail, Mary ! full of grace, the Lord is with thee !' And through this greeting (salutation) she conceived, because he brought her everlasting salvation upon his tongue ; but the devil, through the venom-bearing (venomous) adder (serpent), deceived

the first woman with his evil suggestions and treachery, wherefore the angel spake to our Lord's mother, and thus addressed her: 'Hail (Mary) full of grace, the Lord is with thee!' The grace was brought for the sin of the first woman. She was called 'full,' and not 'empty,' because she was filled with grace, and [through her] sin was eradicated. Let us hear now, in what manner, rejoicing and exulting in her song, the pious and holy virgin sang, and thus said: 'He filleth the hungry with good things, and the rich he sendeth away empty.' The angel said to her, 'Hail Mary! full of grace, the Lord is with thee, in thy heart and in thy womb, and is also with thee as thy helper. But rejoice, thou virgin; for Christ shall descend from his heavenly exaltation, and from his angelic majesty, into thy womb; and he shall so far humble himself that he [shall come] from his paternal bosom, [and choose] thee as his mother.' . . . because it receiveth him, it does not comprehend him, but the faith must be proclaimed from earth up to heaven. Lo! we have now heard that the Heavenly King entered the humble womb of the ever-pure virgin—that was the temple of piety and of all purity. The angel said to her, 'Blessed be thou among all women, for blessed is the fruit of thy womb.' In the words of the angel was heard, that through her offspring should be healed all man and womankind. The first mother of mankind brought affliction (vengeance) into the world when she brake God's behests, and into this affliction was she cast. She brought upon herself and all her kin the greatest misery. And moreover that affliction was so grievous, that every man should come with sorrow into this world, and here live in sorrow, and depart in pain. And now this holy virgin Mary brought to all believers these blessings, and eternal salvation; therefore, let all mankind love and honour her with word and with deed—because . . . she concealed much, she received into her humble bosom the Son of God the Father, whom heaven and earth are unable to comprehend. Let us love our creator, and praise him according to our means with all our might, even as we may hear that the holy virgin did, who loved him with sincerity of heart;

The angel's salutation.

Eve's sin brought mankind to grief.

Mary brought eternal salvation.

and with a joyful mind she sang in her psalm, and thus said, 'My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit doth rejoice in God my Saviour, for he hath seen the meekness of his handmaiden, and from thenceforth all generations have called me blessed ; for he that is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is his name ; and his mercy is great towards Israel, and towards all mankind who fear him.' The Lord came into the world among the people of Israel, and set forth to them example of eternal life, and invited them to heaven's kingdom, through his miracles and evangelical lore (teaching). And then men despised his teaching and gave way to envy, and hung him on the cross, and he through his passion overcame the old traitor, and put down the devil's kingdom on this earth, and then was excluded the lamentation of Eve through the ever-pure virgin. It is to be observed that, after the blessing and salutation of the angel, Mary pondered a long time, and silently considered what the greeting might be. Then the heavenly messenger explained it to her, and said, 'Fear not Mary, for thou hast found favour with God—thou shalt bring forth a son and shalt call him Saviour (Jesus).' When the virgin heard the beginning of this divine issue, then spake she thus : 'How may this be, seeing that I have known no man ?' Then said the angel unto her, 'The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall encompass thee, and he that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.' And again he spake : 'Open now thy fairest and pure bosom, and let the tabernacle of thy womb be expanded, and let the inspiration of the Heavenly embrace be blown into thee ; and the natural heat, through the might of the Holy Ghost, shall be quiescent in thee, and let thy expansive womb be decked with all adornments. The redness of the rose glitters in thee, and the whiteness of the lily shines in thee ; let Christ's bride-bower (chamber) be adorned with every variety of flowers that are produced.' Then the angel spake again, 'Answer, thou virgin, wherefore delayest thou to illumine the earth ? And the angel of the Lord awaiteth thy permission. Lo ! thou hast just heard how it may come to pass that the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall shine around thee, and thou shalt bring forth the King of all purity, and thy virginity thou shalt not impair. Now, for a long time, the door of heaven's kingdom, through which I have been sent hither, stands closed through [the sin of] the first persons, but now through thee they shall be unclosed. O thou blessed Mary, all this captive world awaiteth thy consent ; for God hath appointed thee as a surety here in this world, and through thee shall intercession be made for Adam's guilt to him who formerly, on account of man's sin, was so angry that he closed the holy home ; but through thee shall the entrance again be opened, and thou shalt succour mankind. Wherefore the Heavenly King shall prepare thy womb as a bridal chamber for his son, and also great joy in the bride-chamber ; and he shall forgive all offences whatsoever this world has previously committed against him.' O dearest men, great was this messenger, and a great message brought he, wherefore his name signifies 'the strength of God.' Well was he so named, since he whose coming he spake of and announced had power over all creatures ; and neither the beginning of his kingdom, nor his might nor his majesty shall ever be diminished, but he shall be ever eternal. Then the evangelist informs us that the blessed virgin St. Mary was affrighted, and with trembling voice meekly replied, and thus said, 'I am the handmaiden of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word.' O what beautiful meekness was there found in the ever pure virgin ! The angel said to her that she should be the mother of her creator, and she called herself a 'handmaiden.' Then the heavenly messenger returned home unto the kingdom above, from whence he previously was sent. The Lord in the chamber of the virgin, in that seemly throne, took a bodily garment for his divinity. Then was sent the treasure of divine majesty into the bond (receptacle) of the pure womb [of the virgin]. And after an interval of nine months he came forth, as the prophet declared concerning him, thus saying : 'The Lord hath set his house in the sun, and from it hath gone out as a bridegroom from his bridal chamber.' That came to pass when the King of Glory, upon this earth, came forth from the womb of the ever pure-virgin ; and then the exulting giant as Lord dwelt joyfully on the earth until he came to the throne of the rood, in the ascent of which all our lives he supported ; and he gave his red gem, which was his holy blood, and thereby made us participators of the heavenly kingdom ; and it shall come to pass on Doomsday that he will come to judge the quick and the dead. Then shall all creatures, both the hosts of heaven and of earth, be afraid. Let us rejoice then in the union of God and men, and in the union of the bridegroom and the bride, that is Christ and the holy church. Let us honour Christ set in the manger, because, through meekness, he hath filled fourfoldly this earth with believers. Let us honour also the clothes of his person (humanity), by which our nature (or original condition) was renewed. Let us honour St. Mary, for we ought to praise and bless her, because hosts of angels called her blessed. So must we believe that angels earnestly beheld her from the day that they knew that the blessed Mary had conceived of the Holy Ghost. In her was fulfilled what was sung in the Song of Songs, thus saying : ‘ Solomon’s bed was surrounded by guards, that is by sixty men, the strongest that were in Israel, and each of them had a sword girt to his hip (side), on account of the terror of the night.’ Now then what was Solomon’s bed else but the holy womb of the ever pure virgin ? The peace-loving king, our Lord Jesus Christ, chose and sought that womb. But what meant the sixty strong men who were standing about the bed for fear of nightly alarm ? That was when the holy virgin was encompassed with the heavenly hosts of angels for protection, because they knew that in her abode the heavenly king. So then the heavenly angels shield and guard all holy souls in which the king of peace abides. On this day descended the heavenly treasure into this world from the throne of our creator, that was Christ, the son of the living God, who came for the adorning and honouring of his bride, that is, all who are holy. Therefore let us love our Lord with all our lives, and above all other things, because, of his great mercy, he so humbled himself, that he sought (visited) us in this our exile and gave us a healthful mind and heavenly behests. Therefore we must lead our whole life in meekness after the example of the holy queen of God, for she perceived that the living son of God had sought her. Then was she in all things the meeker, as she manifested in the words with which she praised the Lord, thus saying: 'My soul magnify the Lord.' She praised him not only with words but with all her heart. Let us love him now and magnify his name, not only in prosperous circumstances but also in adverse circumstances, then he will not permit us to be tempted beyond measure. If we through meekness endure all things, then will our Lord be the firmest support and the best shield against all the temptations of the devil. She said 'I am the handmaiden of my Lord, let it be unto me according to thy word.' That was undoubted humility when she called herself 'handmaiden,' and the angel had announced to her that she was chosen as the mother of her creator, and had made known to her that she was the most blessed above all womankind. Well it seemed then that she was humble who bore the humble and merciful king, who concerning himself thus spake to his disciples: 'Learn of me, for I am merciful and lowly;' and most fitting was it too that he should descend to earth through the pure members of the holy virgin, that we may the more assuredly know that he is the origin and teacher of all purity, and we believe therefore and know assuredly that Christ's dwelling-place or abode is not in the heart of any man who hath no mercy. Now then, dearest men, let us believe in our Lord, and love him and keep his behests, then shall be fulfilled in us what he himself hath declared—'Blessed be the pure in heart, for they shall see God.' In that sight shall be all believers, and of his bliss there shall be no end, but ever may they rejoice with him, where he liveth and reigneth, ever without end everlastingly. Amen.

QUINQUAGESIMA OR SHROVE SUNDAY.

HEAR now, dearest men, how Luke the evangelist spake concerning this present time, and also of the time to come ; and how our Lord would come to the place in which he was to suffer. Then when the time was nigh at hand, the Saviour took his twelve disciples apart from the company and said to them, ‘ Now we shall go to Jerusalem, and then shall be fulfilled all the holy writings that were written concerning the Son of Man. And he shall be given into the hands of heathen men, that they may mock him ; they shall bind him and scourge him and spit in his face ; and after the scourging they shall slay him, and the third day he shall rise from death.’ Christ’s disciples were not able then to understand any of these sayings, but they were hidden from them because they were still veiled by worldly thoughts. Then it came to pass that the Saviour came nigh to Jericho, and there sat by the way a blind beggar, and heard a great multitude going before him. Then he asked what it might be. They answered him, and said, ‘ It is Jesus of Nazareth.’ Then he cried with a loud voice, and thus spake : ‘ Have mercy upon me, Son of David, have mercy upon me.’ Those who were going before (the Saviour) bade him be silent, and the more they restrained him the louder he cried, and thus spake : ‘ Have mercy upon me, thou Son of David, have mercy upon me!’ Then the Saviour stood still, and bade the blind man be brought unto him ; and when he drew near unto him, he said to him, ‘ What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?’ The blind man answered him and said, ‘ Lord, that I may see!’ The Saviour said unto him, ‘ Receive thy sight ; thine own faith hath made thee whole.’ Then forthwith he saw, and immediately followed our Lord, and praised and worshipped him. And all the people who saw this miracle magnified his name. Lo ! we have now heard this holy gospel read before us ; nevertheless we must repeat it, so that we may the better understand that it concerns us as an example of eternal life. Now we have previously heard that the Saviour spake to his disciples concerning his passion, and pain, and the mockery which he should suffer at the hands of the Jews. He did this because he would that, when they should see his hard bonds, they should not be troubled in mind; and in order that they should be comforted when they saw him dying, he gave them the promise of his resurrection, which he truly performed, as he also ere did with respect to his passion. His disciples were as yet carnal-minded, and were not yet confirmed with the power of the Holy Spirit, therefore they were not able to understand the words of the heavenly mystery. Nevertheless, he confirmed their belief by means of his heavenly works, though they understood not the words of the heavenly mystery. Now, dearest men, we must turn (apply) those marvels to the truth of (our) faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, those wonders, namely, which he, through his great power, wrought before men's eyes. We knew not previously who the blind man was, but now we may understand what the mystery betokeneth. All mankind was in blindness after that the first persons were driven from the bliss of paradise, and left the brightnesses of the heavenly light, and endured the darknesses and poverties of this world. Our Lord, then, by his coming, illumined this world, and restored, to all believers, the path to the way of life, so that they may, with willingness of mind and good deeds, merit the light of the eternal life. Holy Scriptures liken this world unto the moon, because when it waxeth it is like to the good man, who directeth his hopes to the eternal light; and when the moon waneth, then betokeneth it our mortality and the waning of this world. The evangelist hath said that when the Saviour came nigh to Jericho, that light returned to the blind. That means that the deity took our frail nature, and then forthwith the heavenly light which the first man forsook returned to mankind; and therefore God came down to us because he would that we should be upraised to his divine nature. Right was it that the blind man sat by the way begging, because the Lord himself hath said, 'I am the way of truth,' and he who knows not the brightness of the eternal light is blind; and he liveth and believeth who sitteth by the way begging, and prays for the eternal light, and ceaseth not. He who perceiveth not the darkness of his own sins, let him know that he shall be deprived of the eternal light except he make amends for what he hath previously forgotten. Let us now cry out with sorrowfulness of mind and with sincerity of heart, as the blind man did, and say, 'Have mercy upon me, Son of David, have mercy upon me!' Let us now consider and think what was denoted by the multitude that endeavoured to restrain the blind man from crying out. I will tell you what the multitude denoteth. It betokeneth the carnal will and the unrestrained lusts (vices) which often come through the suggestions of the devil into men's hearts before the Lord's works may abide there; and their minds are thereby moved with various thoughts, so that the voice of their hearts is much troubled in their prayers. Let us now hear why the blind man received light, and what he did when the multitude rebuked him in order that he should be silent. He cried out the more, and the more earnestly entreated the Saviour to have mercy upon him. Then ought we to learn by this example that, when we are occupied with great desire of evil thoughts, then we must earnestly pray God to shield us from the thousand crafts of the devil's temptations. The evangelist said that the Saviour went forth, and when he heard the blind man cry out, he at once stood still and wrought the miracle by which he gave light to the blind man. Let us hear, now, that human nature is ever going on, and the divine might standeth ever firm. What did the divine obtain by passing through the human nature but the power of being born, and being able to move and to arise and to go from one place to another. But, moreover, there was no change either of the divine nature or of the divine power in its imprisonment in the human nature. He (God) is ever living and everywhere present, and filleth every place, and comprehendeth all things, and he shall ever be eternal. This denoteth that he, through his humanity, heareth the voice of our blindness; when we confess our sins and pray for forgiveness, then will he at once compassionate us, and speedily have mercy upon us and forgive us our sins. We must also think of what our Lord spake when the blind man came unto him. He said 'What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?' He did not say this because he (who knows all things and gave the blind man light) knew not what the blind man wanted, but the Lord (who hath previously decreed to give eternal life to those that ask for it) desireth that men should pray to him. Fortunately he hath taught and instructed us how we ought to pray, and, nevertheless, he hath said, 'Your father which is in heaven knows what is needful for you, before ever ye ask him.' We may perceive that he, therefore, has created us that we should pray to him; wherefore then, we must also in the time of prayer cleanse our hearts from other thoughts. Let us hear, too, how the blind man asked not for gold or silver, or worldly splendour, but asked for his eye-sight. Thus we learn then, that the man is blind though he possess much wealth and great beauty, and that it is a great calamity if he is unable to see it. Dearest men, let us imitate the blind man, who was healed both in body and in mind. Let us not entreat our Lord for this transitory wealth, nor for those earthly gifts that swiftly pass away from men, but let us ask the Lord for the light that never endeth. This (earthly) light we have in common with the brute creation, but we must seek the (heavenly) light that we may have it in common with the angels in the spiritual assembly. That (spiritual) light shall never fail. In that light is the way of perfection in which we must walk, that is to say, the true belief (faith). It may very easily happen that some men will either think or say, 'How may I seek that spiritual light which I am unable to see, or whence shall that be manifested to me which with bodily eyes I am unable to see?' To such a man an answer may very soon be given. What believeth the body but by the soul? Let those men think that they are unable to see their own souls. But whatsoever the visible body does or accomplishes, all that doth the invisible soul, through the body, and when the soul separates from the body, what shall it then be but, as it were, a stone or a log; and after the invisible soul has departed from it, it is motionless, and soon rotteth, and turneth to that same earth from which it was previously created, until the Lord shall come on Doomsday and shall command the earth to give back that which it previously received. And then the body shall be immortal though it were previously mortal when the soul (first) received it (the body), and (its state) must, nevertheless, be according to its deserts. Let us now hear, dearest men, what is written in God's books—that the man who beginneth good and then ceaseth (from it), shall not be God's friend at the last day. But he who beginneth good, and continues therein unto the end of his life shall be saved. Therefore it is needful for us to perceive the blindness of our pilgrimage ; we are in the foreign land of this world—we are exiles in this world, and so have been ever since the progenitor of the human race brake God's behests, and for that sin we have been sent into this banishment, and now we must seek here-after another kingdom, either in misery or in glory, as we may now choose to merit. If we will now believe on the Lord and know him, then do we sit by the way as the blind man did. That is to say, then, that we must believe on him and follow up that knowledge with good deeds. Then do we follow our Saviour as the blind man did after that he was able to see. Here is made known to us what the evangelist said—how the Lord spake to Peter when he asked that he might go and bury his father. The Saviour answered him and said, 'Thou shalt follow me, and let the dead bury their dead.' Herein he hath taught us that no man shall love or attend to his relatives if he should first hinder himself from the service of God. Let us also bear in mind that the Lord created the angels, the heaven, the earth, the sea, and all the creatures that are therein. He fills, and comprehends, and sustains all places, and is everywhere present. Nevertheless, he so humbled himself for our necessities, that he descended into the lowly womb of the ever pure virgin, and for our sakes he received that same nature which he previously had created. He would not, then, choose wealthy parents, but those who had little worldly riches, and had not even a lamb to offer for him, but there sufficed for him two young doves and a pair of turtle-doves ; and yet they (his parents) were descended from David's kin, the true royal line. Now we hear that the Lord disregarded this world's wealth, and again, after a time, he suffered many contumelies from the wicked Jews. They scourged him and bound him, and spat in his face, and with open hands struck him, and beat him with their fists, and then they wove a crown of thorns and set it on his head as a royal diadem, and then they hung him on the cross. All this he suffered for our sakes and for our salvation because he was desirous that we should receive that heavenly kingdom which the first persons forfeited through their avarice and presumption. What do we desire to bring forth on Doomsday of that which we have endured for our Lord, since he has suffered so much for our sakes? There are many men who say that they believe in God and love him, and yet will not cease from their unrighteous acquisitions and covetousness, but they are uplifted in their pride, and also are inflamed with bitter envy, and are also defiled with the unclean lust of the flesh. (Dearest) men, the men who follow these vices do not observe the Lord's behests nor follow his instructions; but they rather follow the devil's lore and his instigations; and he ever entices them to all wickedness and to the love of this world by his false-crafts (deceptions); and to him, then, who will not withstand him, the devil shall become terrible at his death, and shall lead him away into everlasting perdition. Let us be mindful, now, of our daily sins, which we have committed contrary to the will of God, so that we, with all our might, may atone for them with fasts, with prayers, with almsdeeds, and with true penitence. That is true penitence when a man confesses the sins he has committed and earnestly makes amendment. Let us weep now, and repeat and remember how the Lord said, 'Blessed are they that weep now, for they shall be afterwards comforted.' So we have now heard that we may with true penitence merit eternal bliss. Again he hath said, 'Woe to you who now laugh, for ye shall hereafter weep everlastingly.' That is the unspeakable vengeance and the eternal torment that is prepared there for the wicked. Better it were for him never to have been born. Therefore we must be mindful of God's behests and of our soul's need the while we may; and let us earnestly beseech our Lord to deliver us from the eternal death, and bring us into the joy of his glory where there is eternal bliss, and the everlasting kingdom; there no sorrow is found, nor sickness, nor pain, nor any sadness; there is no awe (fear), no strife, no wrath, nor any opposition; but there is joy and bliss, and fairness; and the home (abode) is filled with heavenly spirits, with angels, archangels, with patriarchs, and apostles, and with the innumerable host of holy martyrs who shall all dwell with our Lord for ever and ever. THE FIRST SUNDAY IN LENT.

Dearest men, here saith Matthew the Evangelist, that the Saviour was led into the wilderness and that he was tempted by the devil; and when that he had fasted forty days and forty nights he became hungry. The tempter then went to him, and said to him, 'If thou be God's son command that the stones become bread.' The Saviour then answered him and said to him, 'Man's life is not in bread alone, but of every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God.' Then the accursed spirit took him and led him into the holy city and set him upon the pinnacle (shelf) of the temple, and said unto him, 'If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from this height; for it is written that thy angels shall have thee in hand lest thy foot should stumble.' The Saviour again answered and said, 'Tempt not thou the Lord thy God.' The devil then took him a third time, and led him up to a very high hill, and showed him all the kingdoms of the earth and the vain glory of this world, and said unto him, 'All these things will I give thee if thou wilt fall down to me and worship me.' The Saviour answered him and said, 'Get thee behind me Satan, for it is written, Worship the Lord thy God and serve him only.' Then the tempter left him, and his angels came to him and ministered unto him. Dearest men, it is certain that, as soon as the Lord went out of the bath of baptism, he fasted immediately; and the holy fathers and teachers of God's people have instituted the time of this feast [i.e. Lent] before the passion of Christ [i.e. Passion Week], and they have plainly shown that the awful Doomsday shall come about the time that the Son of God suffered upon the rood-gallows (the cross). But we must bear in mind that our Lord after his baptism fasted and was also tempted. It is needful then for us to fast, because we are often tempted by the devil after our baptism. The Lord admonished us by his fasting and by all his works, that we should serve him and overcome the devil, and gain for ourselves eternal life. We must then bear it well in mind that the Almighty, who was in the likeness of God, co-eternal with God the Father, took upon himself the form of our weak nature. Think, too, that were there other animals to be saved and led to eternal life, he would have taken upon him their likeness. But he desired to take upon him our form, (and) so has he given us example of every thing that is good. Wherefore whatsoever good thing we do either in mercy, in humility, in the power of spiritual strength, in the performance of God's behests, or in the fervour of true love to God and man—all these good things come from the fountain of God's mercy and are derived from the might of the Holy Trinity. Lo! we have heard that the evangelist said that the Saviour was led into the wilderness and that he was tempted by the devil. We must believe that he came thither and was not compelled or constrained, but came willingly. And he came thither because he would fight with the accursed spirit. Right was it that he went into the wilderness, where Adam was previously undone. For three reasons the Saviour went into the wilderness—because he would invite the devil to fight with him and deliver Adam from his long banishment, and show to mankind that the accursed spirit contendeth with those whom he sees hastening to God. The temptation was of a threefold nature—First, the tempter said, 'Do as I bid you two, then shall ye two be as God.' Now likewise he tempted God's son through vainglory when he said, 'If thou be the Son of God cast thyself down.' Holy men then knew that he was the true Son of God, because the voice of God the Father was heard at his baptism, thus saying, 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.' Then is it certain that the accursed spirit began to expound God's books and forthwith lied; for it is not said concerning Christ that his foot should strike against a stone, but concerning holy men. For the angels are ever like a shield, a protection to holy men. The Saviour said unto him, 'Tempt not the Lord thy God.' It was not his place to tempt him; nevertheless he went on in his audacity and wished to try whether he would set himself free. He said, 'All these will I give thee

if thou wilt fall down to me and worship me.' Lo! truly he falleth who worshippeth the devil. We must believe that our Lord might in one hour of the day see the delights of all this world, both in its gold and in its precious raiment. But the perverted spirit spake perverse words when (he said) he would give earthly kingdoms to the exalted and heavenly king—to him who shall prepare heavenly kingdoms for all believers. But that sinful creature would that Jesus should worship him—he who ascendeth to the throne of heaven's kingdom and whose footstool is this earthly kingdom—whom none from hence may behold, but there all saints praise and worship him in his exalted power. So must we worship him with words and serve him with deeds. He said, 'Get thee behind me, and bethink thee how great an evil befell thee for thy covetousness and pride, and for thy vain boasting, and therefore I shall not follow thee, for in these three (trials) thou art overcome.' This testimony (of Scripture) the Lord took in this wise. Well did David devise it when he would fight with Goliath, when he took five stones in his shepherd's bag, and yet with one he struck down the giant. So Christ overcame the devil with this testimony (of holy writ). We must bear in mind then to praise and love our Lord with all thanksgivings and extollings for these deeds thus performed by him, because, as he had decreed and ordained before all worlds, he would by means of his son's body deliver this world out of the devil's power, The same son was before all times begotten of God the Father—the Almighty of the Almighty, and the eternal of the eternal—wherefore his might shall be ever eternal and his kingdom shall never be impaired. So the prophet spake concerning him. A man shall be born of Judah and shall rule over all nations. And, therefore, of all the gifts that he has given to this world through his advent, there is no power greater or more useful to the frailty of mankind than his overcoming the accursed spirit and the cruel enemy of mankind. Wherefore now every man may overcome him; and he hath no might against us except against such a man as through inconstancy (weakness) of mind will not withstand him. Through Christ's victory all holy men, who serve him in righteousness and in holiness, were set free. So then shall sinners be subdued by the chief of them (the devil) even as he was subdued (by Christ). Lo! we have heard that the evangelist said that the Saviour was led by the devil into the holy city and also unto the lofty mountain. To believers this then appears very dreadful to hear, but if we consider the humble deeds that he wrought, then that will not appear marvellous to us. It is certain that the accursed spirit is the head (source) of all unrighteous deeds, and also unrighteous men are, as it were, the devils limbs (members), therefore it is not marvellous that the high king and the eternal lord permitted himself to be led unto the high hill, for he permitted himself by the devil's limbs and by evil men to be hanged on the rood (cross). It is not to be wondered at, though he were tempted since he came, that he should be put to death. Wherefore he with his temptation hath overcome our temptation, and our death by his death. The Lord became incarnate in the womb of the ever pure virgin, and without sin he came into the world, and all his life he lived without sin, though he permitted himself to be tempted. But we must consider that the Lord in his temptation did not desire to manifest his great power—he who might, if he wished, at once have caused the tempter to sink into hell's abyss—but with the word of divine writ he overcame him. By his patience he hath set us an example, that as often as we suffer any thing grievous at the hands of evil men, then must we be the more aroused and instigated to divine love, and be more eager to observe God's behests than to avenge our wrongs. We must also remember how great is God's long-suffering and how great is our impatience, and if any one offend us, then are we soon angry and desire, if we can, to take revenge, and [if we are unable] we nevertheless threaten to do so. O how patiently our Lord bore the temptation of the devil—he would not reply to him otherwise than with meekness—he who might have at once punished him in hell. But he would that his praise (renown) should wax the more exalted, therefore he overcame him by patience rather than by destroying him at once. But in him was manifested that he was of two natures in one person—he was true man, therefore the devil dared to tempt him, he was also true God, for angels ministered unto him. We may perceive in him our frail nature, (for) if the devil had not seen him in our nature he would not have tempted him.

We are not to wonder that Christ was tempted by the devil; for he let bad men, the devil's limbs, crucify him.

Let us worship the Lord's divinity, for if he were not true God above all creatures, angels would not have ministered unto him. In this example is manifested that angels minister to all believers when they have overcome the devil. Lo! we have heard that the fast of this forty days began immediately after he rose from his baptism, and then he at once went into the desert; and therefore the elders of the church have instituted that fast before his passion and also before the coming of the awful doomsday. Right is it that all believers should this forty days live in abstinence, and we should also recollect that we must observe the ten commandments and the lore (teachings) of the four evangelists, forasmuch as our body was created of the four elements—of earth, of fire, of water, and of air, so also we sin through four things—through thoughts, words, works, and through will; also there are four times in the year in which we often sin. Then must we again in that abstinence and in these forty nights purify ourselves. Lo! we have now heard that, as commandment was given of old to God's people, we, during this quadragesimal or Lenten period, should give the tenth part of our worldly wealth which we have, so also we must live the tenth part of our days in abstinence. We know well that in the year there are three hundred and sixty-five days; if we then in the six weeks omit the six Sundays of the fast, then there remain no more than six and thirty of the fast-days, and if we live perfectly before God during those days, then do we give for God the tenth part of our days. And let us remember that all this year we have lived carnally minded. Now is there great need that we should give for God the tenth part, and live in abstinence and cleanse us of our sins and earn for ourselves eternal life. The days of this forty nights betoken the present world, and the Easter days denote the eternal blessedness; and the more we now live during those days in abstinence, and the more we are in adverse circumstances in this world, the greater bliss may we have during the Easter days, and so we shall the while we live here in this world. Let us perform for our Lord true repentance and amendment, so that we thereby earn remission of our sins, and eternal life after this world, in eternal blessedness. Let us earnestly consider that we should keep ourselves at this and every time from deadly sins, for each man who dieth in these shall be doomed to everlasting torment. Then must we now, at this time because of our daily sins diligently cleanse ourselves with fasts and with holy vigils and with alms ; so must we also fill our hearts with the sweetness of the divine behests that there may not be found in us any place devoid of spiritual power, where-in wicked vices may dwell. We cannot be without venial sins, but we must at this time, these few days, live in abstinence and cleanse our body and heart from evil thoughts as much as we are able, because the bliss and the excess of the body leadeth man to sin, and abstinence cleanseth him and leadeth him to forgiveness. Let no man believe that this fast sufficeth him for eternal salvation, except he add thereto other good deeds ; and he who desires to present his abstinence (fasting) as an acceptable offering to the Lord, must perfect it with alms and with works of mercy. Concerning that Isaiah the prophet hath said, 'Break (share) thy loaf with the needy, and as soon as thou seest a naked beggar, clothe him, and disregard never thy kind.' Lo ! we have heard that fasting is very pleasing to God, if the man raise his hands to almsdeeds. The merciful Lord our Creator receiveth very joyfully all the good deeds which any man doth to his neighbour from a pious and merciful heart. And whatever man may fast with good will and deprive his body of next day's meat that he may cheerfully fill the poor man's body, and comfort his neighbour with that by which he has distressed himself, then is that fasting pure and holy. Concerning that Joel the prophet said, 'Hallow your fast and bring a small offering to the Lord,' that is our bodily abstinence and almsdeed, which rejoiceth the poor. All men however cannot do this, but those must do so to whom God hath given [the goods of] this world, and therefore he giveth them wealth so that they shall succour

THE THIRD SUNDAY IN LENT.

Hear now, dearest men, what the excellent teacher (St. Paul) hath said concerning men's tithes. He said 'the time is nigh at hand that we should gather together our substance and our gains.' Let us, then, earnestly give thanks to the Lord who hath given us these fruits, and let us be mindful of what Christ himself has commanded us in the gospel. He hath said that we should, every twelvemonth, give (to God) the tithe of our increase. Lo! our Lord so humbled himself as to give us all the fruits which the earth produces. Though he distributes them variously to men, nevertheless he has bidden us to distribute every twelvemonth, for his sake, the tenth part of our fruits and of our cattle. He did not enjoin that because he had any need thereof, but because he would manifest to us his mercy both in heaven and on earth. It is very needful for us, then, to be obedient to him, so that we may enjoy the beauty of his glory. Thus the Lord himself spake by the prophet, saying, 'Bring your tithes into my barn.' What barn meant he but the kingdom of heaven? And he also said, 'So do, that there may be meat prepared for you in my house.' What else meant he but that we should fill the belly of the needy with our riches? Then shall we never hunger in eternity; but he will open for us the fountains of heaven, and he will give us the abundance of his fruits; and by all these things think, O foolish man, what evils has the Lord ever enjoined that his lore were not worthy of one's obeying it? Then it is said in these books that the Lord himself hath declared that mankind should not neglect to give their first-fruits for God, and now if we do not that, then we commit a great sin thereby. And yet it is worse for us to give tithes of our goods if we desire to give the worst to God. The eminent teacher (St. Paul) hath said, 'Worship your Lord God with meet things, and offer to him the fruits of soothfastness (sincerity). Then shall the Lord fill your barn with plenty.' Ye need not think that you are giving that without return (gratuitously) which ye give under the Lord's security, though ye receive not at once the recompence. It may be, however, that many a man will consider what reward he shall receive from the Lord, or how God will afterwards requite him for what he previously gave to the poor for his sake. 'If ye then believe,' said the Lord, 'that what ye give here, in my name, shall turn out to your advantage, then shall it be given advantageously to you, and it shall bring forth for your souls a hundredfold reward.' But if ye doubt concerning the alms ye give for God's sake, and fear that ye will receive insufficient reward, then shall you wholly lose the alms which ye now give for God's sake, and they (alms) shall not become of any benefit to you. In this gospel it saith that our tithes are the tribute of poor men. Give, now, the tenth part of all your acquisitions to poor men, and to God's church, to the poorest of God's servants, who, with divine songs to honour the church, because the church must feed those who dwell therein. Behold, now, how joyful the poor are when any one comforts them with food and clothing. Much more joyful shall be the soul of that man when for her he distributes his alms. For on account of his alms, and his fasting, she shall live everlastingly. (But) he who liveth without alms and fasting shall perish in hell, and he shall never have rest. St. Paul hath also said that God commanded all those who forsake their church and neglect to hear the songs of God, to pine at the door of heaven's kingdom. Because no man need have any doubt of this, that the forsaken church will not take care for those that live in her neighbourhood, therefore, my dearest brethren, give your tithes to her, and for God's sake distribute them to those who observe their orders with purity of life, and will rightly be diligent about the praise of God. So the excellent teacher has commanded us rightly to observe God's law and to support firmly God's Church—both the laity and the clergy. The mass-priests, who are the teachers of God's churches, shall rightly teach their confessionals, and give instruction according as our fathers have previously determined. Let no priest, neither for fear of a rich man, nor for reward, nor for any man's favour (love), be afraid of always deciding rightly if he desire to escape God's judgments. And he must not be too desirous of dead men's wealth, nor be too little thankful for their alms because they think that he can absolve their sins. And the teachers must humbly teach and instruct sinful men, so that they may know how to confess their sins aright—because they (sins) are so very various, and some so very impure, that a man will avoid ever telling them except the priest ask him concerning them. 'Oh!' said St. Paul, 'that is accounted the devil's treasure for a man to hide his sins from his confessor,' because to our adversary (the devil) a man's sins are more acceptable than all earthly treasure. The priest that is very tardy in driving out the devil from a man, and in speedily ridding the soul with oil and water from the adversary, shall be assigned to the fiery river and the iron hook. For St. Paul said that he saw not far from the side of the priest, of whom we have said above that he was drawn by the iron hook into the pitchy river, another old man, whom four accursed angels led, with great cruelty, and sank him into the fiery water up to his knees; and they had bound him with fiery chains, so that he could not say, 'God have mercy upon me!' Then said the eminent teacher to the angel that led him, 'Who is this old man?' The angel replied, 'He is a bishop who did more evil than good. Before the world he had a great name, and disregarded it all, and his Creator, who had given him that name.' Then said St. Paul, that (since) the bishop had not shown mercy to widows, nor to orphans, nor to any of God's poor, he was requited according to his own deeds. And we are told in these books, that to those bishops who are here in the world, there shall befall a fate very similar to the bishop's whom St. Paul saw in the fiery hell, if they will not observe God's law as Holy Scripture biddeth them. The bishop must, if he will obtain God's mercy and forgiveness of his sins, compel the priests with love or with fear, rightly to observe God's law, and (also) the community over whom they are [set], and the laity over whom they ought to be rulers; and that they do not suffer them to lead a wicked life, but that they themselves set a good example to the people. For the good teacher hath said that, when the priest or the bishop was led into eternal perdition, they could not be of any service, neither for themselves nor for the flock, which they previously should have kept for God. Whom does God remind of tribute more than the bishop? because the bishop is God's vassal, and he is equally holy with his apostles, and equal in rank with his prophets, if he permit not God's people to lead a wicked life. So St. Paul hath said that Christ himself bade Moses to say to other teachers, that if they could not by love convert Christian people to observe rightly God's law, that many evil men should pay the penalty with their lives, and then the other folk would turn to God's true service. As the eminent teacher has said, the king and the bishop ought to be shepherds of Christian people, and turn them from all unrighteousness. And if he then shall be unable to turn them to what is right so that they should cease from their iniquities, then shall each man atone for his iniquities according to the measure of his guilt. The bishop and the priest, if they will rightly serve God, must minister daily to God's people, or at least once a week sing mass for all Christian people who have ever been born, from the beginning of this world. And it is God's will that they should intercede for them. Then shall they receive from God greater reward than they may do by any other gifts—for very dear to God are his people. And those that are in heaven shall intercede for those who are engaged in this song. And they shall be in the prayers of all earthly folk, who have been Christians, or yet may be; and they shall never die in their sins, and God's mercy and that of all saints shall be upon them. And God hath permitted earthly men to bless all Christian people and to present to him frequently divine offerings, for they are called God's children, and are in communion with all the saints. And this work is the greatest source of annoyance to devils, because they have many souls in their power to whom God will yet show mercy on account of their powerful supplications, and on account of the prayers of earthly men, and of all saints, and for his great mercy. The holy teacher hath said, 'Let us, the children of men, not cease to please God and annoy the devil day and night, and to bless ourselves with the token (sign) of Christ's Cross. Then the devil will flee from us, because it is a greater terror to him than the sword may be to any man, if one were about to strike off his head.' And to all Christian men it is commanded that they shall bless their entire bodies seven times with the sign of Christ's Cross. First in the early morning, the second time at undern-tide (nine o'clock), the third time at midday, the fourth time at the hour of none (three o'clock), the fifth time in the evening, the sixth time at night, ere he go to rest, the seventh time at dawn. At all events he should commend himself to God. And if the teachers will not constantly enjoin this upon God's people, then shall they be very guilty before God, because God's people ought to know how to shield themselves from devils. And the teachers hereafter shall be deserving of condemnation if they will not teach the people to cease from their sins and observe God's behests. The bishop must lay a great injunction upon the priests, if they will preserve themselves from the wrath of God, to tell God's people that on Sundays and Mass-days they should diligently visit God's church, and joyfully hear there the divine instruction. The teachers shall not neglect the instruction, nor shall the people be too proud to humble themselves to him if they desire God's forgiveness. For where the gospel is said, there many a man's heart is touched, and God will be merciful to the men who, with meek heart, believe in him. Then must the bishops and priests diligently urge men of all ranks and bid them rightly to observe God's decrees; the servants of God to keep their divine services and their churches rightly, and the laity as it properly behoveth them. But if any one will not listen to him, then must the priest punish him as it is here enjoined. If the servant of God will not rightly serve the church, then let him receive along with the laity the hardest service. And this must the mass-priest needs enjoy, or take upon him the sins of God's servant; then shall he be like the angels who of yore contended against God and then were cast into hell. Therefore the eminent teacher hath said this concerning those same, that they thereby might teach other men; and the bishop and the priest shall then be guiltless before God. Moses received a shining crown of glory because he always punished those who despised God. He who despiseth God's behest shall be like a heathen, and many a devil shall abide in him. St. Paul said, 'Great (important) is the injunction of the apostolical order'; because our Lord said to him that whomsoever he bound on earth should be bound in heaven, and whomsoever he loosed on earth should be loosed in heaven. Then I counsel you, my brethren, to give the tenth of your goods to poor men, who before the world have but little. Then shall all the saints rejoice over you, and God himself shall be with you, and ye with him, and ye shall receive forgiveness of your sins. And whatever man will not distribute the tithe of his substance and his gains for God's sake, to him shall not be given the Lord's mercy nor forgiveness of sins, but he shall be afflicted with punishments after his death, and of all his goods he shall then be empty-handed, and all things shall then be taken forcibly away from him. And this is enjoined on each man who may be skilful in anything, either in greater wisdom or less. Then let him ever yield to the Lord his tithes on account of his earthly gains, and on account of the fruits of eternal life. Therefore the Lord ever reminds every man of what he here gives him; and if we then joyfully and largely distribute to poor men the wealth which God has previously given us, then shall we receive both earthly and heavenly reward. 'Oh,' said the eminent teacher, 'thou foolish and unwise man, wherefore hast thou deprived thyself of the twofold blessings by breaking God's behests. Why consideredst thou not that it is all God's? Oh, thou covetous and rich man, what wilt thou do if the Lord taketh from thee nine parts of thy wealth, and letteth thee have only the tenth part? For it is right that nine parts should be taken from the man that refuses God the tenth part.' It is written in Christ's books that the Lord himself said that the tenth parts of our goods were under our own control, both as regards land and other possessions and other acquisitions; wherefore at the last day it shall ever turn to grief to that man who refuseth it to God. If, however, we will distribute them cheerfully and bountifully to poor men, then will the Lord open for us the fountains of heaven; and he will send us his blessings from above, and our wheat, and our vineyards, and all our earthly riches shall be blessed if we act aright; and he will also shield us from all enemies. Lo! each man desireth that the Lord should give him all that is needful, and yet is not willing to do his will by distributing, for his sake, what he has previously given him. Why can we not consider that the earth is God's, and the substance by which we live is God's, and we are all his; and under his control is all the earth; and the winds and the rains which produce the fruits of the earth are all his; and the sun's heat that warmeth the earth and all creatures are his; and he wrought them all, and hath them under his control. And our Lord is very mindful of all the gifts that he has bestowed upon us, and at the last day we must restore all that he has previously given to us on earth, and he will then recompense us according as we have done here, both good and evil. Dearest men, let us consider, if we for awhile are in any tribulation where we despair of our lives, do we not then pray for God's mercy, and will he not then be dearer to us than all worldly riches, if he will spare and have mercy upon us? Wherefore let us consider what that torment will be to which no termination comes. 'Therefore do I now admonish by the divine message,' the great teacher said, 'that ye absolve you of your sins before ye die;' because it now rapidly draweth nigh to our dying day; and it is very uncertain whether our heirs and successors will act faithfully after our lives, if previously we ourselves have been negligent, because few are they who are true to the dead. Of a truth, I tell you, whosoever will not love the Lord, and for his sake distribute his goods, shall be deprived of them by the Lord with great severity. And as many poor men as die in the neighbourhood of the rich and wealthy, and because he will not give them the tenth part of his wealth, of all those men's death shall he be guilty and a murderer before the throne of the eternal Judge, because that he wretchedly and arrogantly previously kept his wealth, and refused it to the Lord's poor. Let the man who desires to obtain the heavenly blissfulness, ever rightly give the tenth of his goods to God, and distribute his alms even from the nine remaining parts, and give to poor men the remains of his table, and his old garments. Then shall it be hereafter kept for him in the heavenly treasury; and whatever God may give us more than we shall necessarily make use of, let us always bestow it upon those that have less. He does not give it to us in order that we should hide or give it ostentatiously, or to any men who do not love God much, but we must give it to God's church, and bestow it upon the poorest men. Then is that a good thing here in this world, and also in the world to come. Riches, and great ostentation, and unrighteous greed, and denying the poor, are very great sins before God. Forsake, now, the deceitful riches and the unlawful acquisitions, as the saints did who, in this life, sought naught nor yearned to have aught but that they might bring into the exaltation of heaven all that they had gained on earth through God's assistance. It is not forbidden you, however, to possess wealth, if ye acquire it aright, because it is very acceptable to God that ye should give to poor men, and with your wealth so merit it as to obtain the everlasting joy in which the Lord is with his saints, and with all those that will observe and perform his behests. To the Lord be praise, and glory, and peace in eternity, for ever, world without end. Amen.

THE FIFTH SUNDAY IN LENT.

Here is related how the excellent teacher spake and said, 'Dearest men, it behoveth us first to hear the words of holy writ, and afterwards to give and yield meet fruits.' What use is it for a man to listen earnestly to the words of the holy gospel, if he will not have and hold them in his heart? if nevertheless the root of the holy record be pulled up and removed from his heart? How may he then have and hold spiritual fruit, if he will not believe in God, and with sincere heart bear in mind and consider how David the Psalmist began to ponder and think as to what were the works and deeds of the good man? And he therefore thus spake: 'The man who speaketh truth with his mouth, and sincerely thinketh it in his heart, and truly performeth it, and puts down the deceitful words of his tongue—he is the man who hath and holdeth the belief of God's kingdom, because he would not deceive his neighbour through treacherous words.' It is the practice of many a man ever to say to his neighbour the words that he thinketh may be most pleasant for him to hear, and nevertheless, at the same time, he taketh thought how he may most easily betray him through the sweetness of those words. It is the devil's practice ever to betray the unwary through the sweetness of sins, and he will afterwards recompense him for it all cruelly and ill. There are many men who joyfully hear the words of the holy lore, and yet quickly forget, what they a little before, with anxious ears and with inward thought, had heard related and told. Wherefore they neither bear nor have with them spiritual fruit, because that the holy seed, which previously was proclaimed and told them by the mouth of the teacher, has faded and died in them, therefore the hearing and the zeal is of no use to the

We must bring forth fruits meet for repentance.

David describes the good man as one who will not deceive his neighbour.

Ps. xv, 3, 4.

It is the devil's habit ever to betray the unwary.

Hearing and zeal is of no use to the unbelieving and negligent.

unbelieving and careless men, as David the Psalmist has said. Many men there are who, before other men, begin to do a little good and quickly abandon it. Wherefore Christ himself has said that he will not hear the negligent and forgetful man's prayers. It is all to no purpose for a man to eat good meat, or at a feast to drink the best wine, if it happeneth that he afterwards spews up and loses that which he previously received for enjoyment, and for the advantage of his body. So, then, we must not unwarily relinquish the spiritual teaching by which our soul liveth and is fed. As the body cannot live without meat and drink, so then the soul, if she be not spiritually fed with God's word, will perish through hunger and thirst. Therefore much more ought we to take thought of spiritual than of carnal things. As the body will depart from the things of this world, even so will the soul live with spiritual things in eternity. She will again receive her body at the last day, and with it shall atone for all the deeds of the body. Many men there are whose hearts are hard, who hear the divine instruction, and, though they are often preached to and addressed, become negligent. These, hereafter, on the terrible doomsday, shall be unable to make any excuse, but shall then, along with devils, fall into eternal torment. Wherefore let us withdraw our minds from the love of this world's sinful indulgences and desires, lest this world's love cut us off from the enjoyment (love) of eternal life and everlasting light, in which God dwelleth with his saints in heaven and with all the souls who here in this world shall rightly turn to God, and with pure heart confess their sins and make amends toward God. Lo! we know that all the glory and comeliness (beauty) of this life hieth and hasteneth to an end, for the body grows old, and its beauty fades and returns to dust. So, then, the glory and comeliness of the soul, that in eternity dwelleth in the joy of heaven's kingdom, there rejoiceth and shineth with Christ. Wherefore, dearest men, I pray and beseech each of you to contemplate himself in his heart with silent mind, what the mortal body is like when the soul is gone, and the beauty which he loved here in this world—like to the flowering tree and blooming flowers. We know that Christ himself said by his own mouth, 'When ye see growing and blowing all the fruits of the earth, and the fragrant odours exhaling from plants, then soon afterwards they shall dry up and dwindle away on account of the summer's heat.' So is it like to the nature of man's body when youth first bloometh and is fairest; then quickly the beauty fadeth and turneth to old age, and afterwards he is troubled by sorrow and by various aches (ailments) and infirmities. And the whole body loatheth to perform those youthful lusts that he aforetime so earnestly loved, and which were sweet to him to perform. Then, again, they shall appear very bitter to him, after that death shall come to him to announce God's judgment. The body then, shall be turned to the strongest and foulest stench, and his eyes shall then be sealed up, and his mouth and his nostrils shall be closed, and then with difficulty will the dead man be kept in proximity to any living man. Where shall be the vain desires then, and the sweetnesses of the carnal lust which he previously loved so heartily? Where shall be the feasting then, and the vanities, and the immoderate mirth, and the false vaunting, and all the idle words to which he aforetime wickedly gave utterance? All those shall pass away as a cloud and as a stream of water, and shall never again make their appearance. Such shall be the end of the body's comeliness, which now foolish and unwise men much love, because they do not consider how late they were born into this world, and how soon they must again depart from it; and in what pain they were conceived by their mothers, and in what toil they shall afterward live, and how this world each day decayeth and hasteneth to an end. What else is the life of this world but a little interval or delay of death? As the long illness of the sick man when God will not permit him to live in ease, nor yet may he die, and nevertheless until death he afflicts him, so is this earthly life. Truly, indeed, may we think that it (life) is death's interval rather than life's. What man is he that may number all the pains and the diseases that man is born to? In sin he is conceived, and he is brought forth in his mother's pain. He is nurtured in hunger, in thirst, and in cold. In toil and in sweat he liveth. In weeping, and in sadness, and in pain his body must here abide, and then the sinful shall end his life in the sulphurous fire of hell. Woe to those men, then, that consider not the miseries of this world to which they are ordained, and will not be mindful of the day of their departure, nor of the fearful Day of Doom, and will not trust in the eternal glory of the heavenly kingdom, nor perceive that they were at first created in the image of God, and also for eternal life, and not for eternal death. And they do not consider that the door of the heavenly kingdom is ever open to those who believe and do aright, and also shut to those who are sinful and act unrighteously. And they do not consider that the greedy hell is ever open to devils and to those men who now live after the devil's lore, that is, murderers, perjurers, and those who commit adultery with other men's wives, and with those persons that are consecrated as brides to Christ after that they have been covered with the consecrated veil. It is said that the same adversary that previously taught them to sin, will afterwards torment them with great torments, unless they previously will amend their lives. Wherefore, said the eminent teacher, that they should with fasts, and with prayers, and with shedding of tears overcome all the devil's will. In hell are thieves, chiders, covetous men, who deprive men wrongfully of their property, proud men, and magicians who practise enchantments and deceptions, and deceive and mislead unwary men thereby, and wean them from the contemplation of God by means of their sleights and deceptions. There are also evil reeves (governors) who now give wrong judgments, and pervert the right laws of just men, which aforetime were rightly instituted. Concerning those judges Christ himself hath spoken. He said, 'Judge now, as ye will that ye should be judged again at the last day of this world.' Verily, the evil judge receiveth a paltry reward, and perverteth the righteous judgment for sake of the reward. It is said, then, that he shall receive eternal condemnation along with devils, because he previously, in this world, performed his own will; and then shall he abide endlessly in eternal torments, where he shall then have boiling flames, and anon the severest cold; all grief, strife, hunger, thirst, weeping, wailing, and miseries more than is possible for any man's invention to recount. There need be never hope for any light, nor for a friend who may ever deliver him from the power of the grim devil because of the opposition he made against God, and because he would not believe in the teaching of God's books. Wherefore, dearest men, it is very needful for us to know that Judas is now tormented by devils in eternal torments, because he sold Christ for the sake of a bribe. So, then, with him now must burn those who despise their own souls for the sake of meed, and love unrighteous gains. They have the name of judges, but the actions of thieves; for they are, among themselves, ravenous wolves, when, for the sake of bribes, they condemn the innocent poor. To them was injunction rightly given to punish ever with severity wicked doers—thieves, manswearers, adulterers, those who practise divination and will not forsake it; those men should the judges severely chastise. But, nevertheless, all judges are not here spoken of alike, for some are much readier to correct God's people than they are to rob the poor and the innocent, and they give their judgments through the fear of God and of his saints, much more than for the sake of bribery. And they shield the innocent and judge severely the guilty. Those judges are rather to be praised than blamed, for they desire to lead aright the unbelieving men who now thoughtlessly and heedlessly serve God. Those judges are, by God's favour, everywhere, both that they may guard themselves from sins, and also set right others that sin. Therefore, on doomsday they shall hear from God this word which he shall speak: 'Thou good and faithful servant, go thou now into the eternal joy of the heavenly glory which thou previously in this world didst earn, by belief in me and my saints, and by a right understanding.' Then must each of us bear his deeds before the throne of Christ, and of all his saints, and then we must yield account for the deeds of our whole life, which we ever ere wrought in this world; wherefore we must now preserve ourselves from great sins, so that we may the easier amend the venial ones. Many men ween that murder is the greatest sin, but we must be aware that there are murders of three kinds. The first is for a man to have enmity towards another, and to hate him and to backbite him. Wherefore it is a very great sin for one man to hate another and to slander him. It has been said that it is the root of all other sins. Very seldom will a man confess that he is envious or slanderous. The man who killeth another and immediately convinces himself that he has committed a great crime and a great sin—many such men, then, oft turn to penitence and to confession, and pray to our Lord for forgiveness; for there is no doubt that he will grant forgiveness to those who desire to merit it. The envious and the slanderous, indeed, though they be guilty of murder, do not believe that they are guilty of any sin. The envious do not perceive their guilt, though they are worthy of death, therefore they never pray to God for forgiveness. This deadly vice is to be shunned by us all, lest it sink us into hell's abyss. Verily, the glory of this world is brief and transitory, (but) the glory of the Lord and his kingdom continueth for ever. There is that eternal light without darkness; there is youth without age; there is that excellent life without ending; there is joy without sadness; there no hunger shall be, nor thirst, nor wind, nor storm, nor the noise of water. There shall be no separation of loved ones, nor reunion of those at enmity, but there shall be eternal rest, and the festivity of saints shall last there for ever. There is that unspeakable kingdom which God giveth to all those that will love him. Let us love him, then, with all our heart's might, then will he love us in heaven with all his saints. Ever, to all ages, be to our Lord praise, and glory, and honour, without end, everlastingly. Amen.

Here is related, dearest men, concerning the honour of this holy time, how that the merciful Lord and the Redeemer of mankind so humbled himself that he descended from the exaltation of the paternal glory into this earth, because that he would suffer for the salvation of all men and release us from the devil's servitude, and reveal to us his power and his will; and how with undaunted mind he drew nigh to the place in which he should suffer for our redemption and for the humiliation of the devil. On this day our Lord Jesus was honoured and praised by the folk of the Jews, because they perceived that he was Christ the Saviour, through the marvellous work of raising Lazarus from the dead on the fourth day of his being entombed. Then they did bear before him blowing palm-twigs, because it was a Jewish custom when their kings had obtained victory over their foes and were returning home again, to go to meet them with blowing palm-twigs in honour of their victory. And it was very fitting that our Lord did so in like manner, because he was the king of glory. This day they called the day of victory. The name denotes the victory by which the triumphant Lord withstood the devil, when that he by his death overcame the eternal death, as he himself spake by the prophet—he said, ‘O death, I will be thy death, and I will be thy sting in hell.’ A great sting put our Lord in hell when he descended thither and spoiled (harrowed) hell, and led away from thence the souls of the just, and delivered from the devil’s power, those whom from the beginning of the world he had there gathered together in bondage. He led them away from hell’s abyss unto the exalted majesty of heaven’s kingdom. John, the beloved disciple (of our Lord), has made it known to us in the gospel, and thus spoke—‘Jesus came six days before the Jewish Easter to Bethany, where Lazarus had died, and raised him from the dead.’ Martha, his sister, then made preparation for the evening repast for the Saviour; and her sister, whose name was Mary, sat at the Saviour’s feet, for she would hear his words and his teaching. Martha was desirous to minister to the Saviour to his satisfaction. She stood before him and said unto him, ‘Why wilt thou not heed that my sister leaveth me alone to serve? speak to her that she may help me.’ The Saviour answered her and said, ‘Martha, Martha, be thou heedful and mindful of the things of Mary, that is, that thou at all times perform the will of God, which is the one best thing wherewith thou mayest please God. Mary hath chosen the best part, which shall never be taken from her.’ Lazarus was then sitting alone with the Saviour and his disciples. Mary took a pound of precious ointment and anointed the feet of the Saviour and afterwards dried them with her locks. Then was all the house filled with the sweet smell of the precious ointment. One of the Saviour's disciples named Judas Iscariot, because he came from the town called 'Scariot,' was then exceedingly angry and said, 'Why should this ointment thus be put to loss? easily might it have been sold for three hundred pence, and that distributed to poor men.' He said not that because he took any thought for needy men, but because he was a covetous man and the most wicked thief, wherefore the apostles allowed him to carry their wallets, because they wished thereby to try his covetousness. [But] he was also the worst covetous man, because he sold for money the Lord of heaven and of all the world. The Saviour then answered him and said, 'Why are ye on account of this deed so grieved? She has wrought a good work upon me. Ye have the poor always (with you) if ye desire to do good, but me ye have not always. But let this deed thus be a witness of my burial. Verily I say unto you, that this gospel shall be said and preached throughout all the world, because this was done in remembrance of me.' When the Jewish folk knew that Jesus was come to the home of Lazarus, then they proceeded thither, nevertheless, not for his (Jesus') sake, but out of a desire of curiosity on account of the miracle, and they wished to see Lazarus, whom he had previously raised from the dead. Then was fulfilled that which aforetime was spoken: 'This people honour me with their words, and yet their heart is far from me.' Then the rulers and the elders purposed to kill Lazarus, because many men believed on the Saviour when he raised him from the dead. Then in the morning came thither a great multitude for the feast-day. Then the Saviour went thence to Jerusalem, and when they saw that, they took blooming palm-twigs and bore them before him, and bowed down to him and honoured him, as is befitting a king; when that he drew nigh to Jerusalem then came he first to the town of Bethphage near Mount Olivet. The Saviour then said to his two disciples, to Peter and John, 'Go now into this village that standeth over against you; then ye shall find there an ass tied and her foal; unloose them and bring them to me. And if any one forbiddeth it you, say that the Lord hath need thereof, then forthwith they shall let them go for me.' This came to pass that the prophecy might be fulfilled which was previously spoken, 'Say to the daughters of Sion, that their King cometh, meek and humble, sitting upon an ass, (even) the foal of the animal.' His disciples then did as he bade them, and brought him the ass, and made him sit thereon. All the people that went before him strewed their garments before him. Some took branches from the trees and strewed them in the way. The multitude who went before, and those that followed after, all cried and said, 'Jesus, Son of David, blessed art thou in the name of the Lord, save us on high (Hosanna in the highest).' When that the Saviour then went into the city, all the place was moved, and the citizens cried and said, 'Who is this mighty one that thus magnificently cometh?' The people answered them and said, 'It is the Nazarene prophet of Galilee, who should be praised among all nations and honoured also by the mouth of milk-sucking children.' He then went into Solomon's holy temple and then cast out the shambles of the chapmen, and the seats of the money-changers, and said, 'My house should be called the house of prayer, but ye make it dens for thieves.' Then went to him the blind and the halt, and he forthwith healed them. All this came to pass that we should acknowledge the power of our Lord and honour him with great love. The evangelist has said that the Saviour came to Bethany six days before Easter. By this it is signified that he came in the sixth age into this world to redeem mankind. Our Lord left not this world without instructors any longer than two hundred years, but he sent patriarchs and prophets who should speak of his advent. So he then, on the six days before his passion, manifested various works each day. First, on the Saturday, he raised Lazarus from the dead, and on the Lord's Sunday, which is now present, he was recognised as king and praised, and also by the mouths of children acknowledged and honoured. And on the following day he cursed the figtree, on which he found no fruit; that denoteth the sinful, who have no fruit of good works. On the third day he said to his disciples, 'Now in two days shall the Son of Man be given into the hands of sinful men.' On the fourth day he was in the house of Simon the leper, where-in the woman poured out the precious ointment on his head. On the fifth day he washed the feet of his disciples, and sat with them at the evening feast, and to them gave his body under the form of bread, and his blood in the form of wine. The sixth day the Jews hanged him on the Cross, where he shed his blood for our salvation and redeemed us from the devil's bondage. The evangelist has said that Martha and Mary betoken this transitory and fleeting life. Martha received Christ in her house, that she might minister unto him. What does she signify but the holy church, that is, believing men who prepare a clean habitation in their hearts for Christ himself? He hath said, 'I will dwell in them, and I will be their God for ever.' Of that the apostle said, 'The Almighty God seeketh the pure heart for to dwell therein; therefore God's temple must not be defiled, but the man of God must be perfect in righteous works.' The writer hath said that Mary took a pound of precious ointment and anointed therewith the Saviour's feet and dried them with her locks. Then was all the house filled with the sweet smell. This ointment was made of eighteen kinds of herbs. There were three of the best — olive, nard, and spike, which is of a brown colour and of a good smell, and that which is anointed therewith never becomes foul. This was done for us for an example of life, and if we now will anoint our souls with the oil of mercy, then may we bring to the Lord the unwithered fruits of good works. Let us be ever mindful that we do those good things that God's books teach us, that is, fasts and holy vigils, and almsgiving according to our means; and with many other spiritual virtues we may deserve to bring to our Lord the sweet smell of good works. Mary, who sat at the Saviour's feet to hear his words and his teaching, betokeneth holy church in the future world, which shall be freed from all its labours, and shall have sight alone of the heavenly glory, and shall rest in the presence of our Lord, and shall unceasingly praise him. St. John the evangelist hath revealed to us that he heard hosts of angels singing praises to God, thus saying, 'Worthy art thou

Lord God to receive glory, and honour, and power, and blessings, and thanks of all thy creatures that thou hast created in heaven and in earth, according to thy will.' Lazarus, whom Christ raised on the fourth day after that he was abiding corrupt in the tomb, betokeneth this world, which was corrupt through the practices of the most grievous impurity of sins and of wickednesses. Even so the heavy burden of the tomb and of death sitteth on the dead bodies, and the stone and the earth oppress them (the dead bodies). So sat, then, the intolerable burden of sins on all mankind [until the coming] of our Lord Jesus Christ. Now we ought to imitate Mary, who anointed the Saviour's feet and dried them with her locks; that is, that we should do good works and live aright; then follow we the Lord's footsteps, that is, if we teach other men well, and they rightly after our lore live to God; then do we bring the Lord a sweet savour in our deeds and in our precepts, as Paul the apostle hath said, 'We may anoint the Lord's feet if we will do good to other believers and help the poor—he who best can—and if we ever commiserate another's afflictions, and likewise also greatly rejoice at another's welfare.' The evangelist hath said that Judas was very angry because of the ointment. He said that it would be more profitable if it were sold for three hundred pence and distributed to the poor. Judas was like those men who will do ill to and destroy God's church. Yet he who was the teacher and example of soothfastness, and the king of all purity, permitted this godless thief to be with him. But by this example he hath shown us that true men have among them thieves and sinful men, and nevertheless they must suffer patiently their wickedness against themselves. Christ hath set us an example of patience. He did not say to Judas, 'Thou speakest this by reason of thy covetousness and thy thievery;' but he said, 'Let this be so, a good work has she wrought upon me.' With these words he manifested that he would suffer death. He said, 'Ye have the poor always with you, but me ye have not always.' The holy church is never without the poor. Those men alone have Christ in their hearts who are decreed to eternal life. Christ himself said, 'Ye have me ever present among believing men, through the glory of my divine nature ;' and nevertheless, the hidden presence hath not departed from us. Many men have him through the holy baptism, and through true belief of Christ's sacrifice that we receive at the altar ; but those men who live wickedly have not Christ in their hearts, but they prepare a habitation for devils, and eternal punishment for themselves. The evangelist said, 'The elders of the priests determined to slay Lazarus ;' and those wicked ones would not think that the Lord might again raise him as he had previously raised him from soul's death through his divine power. Matthew, the evangelist, said, 'When the Saviour would draw near to Jerusalem, he first came to Bethphage.' This was very fitting, when he had come from heaven to earth, that he would suffer for mankind, and should draw near to the time of our redemption. The town of Bethphage betokeneth Holy Church, in which are sung the holy mysteries (or sacraments) and where men confess their sins, and there pray to God for forgiveness. We have previously heard that the Saviour sent his two disciples, by which are betokened holy teachers, who must continue in true belief and in perfect works, and teach (men) love of God and of men. Without these two (loves) no man can come to eternal life. He said, 'Go into the village that stands before you.' Why did the Lord mention the royal city with a contemptuous name ? because villages in many places have often a mean situation. Yet this city was high and princely, but, nevertheless, Christ so contemptuously mentioned the great city and the holy Jerusalem, because the citizens were to him, on account of their unbelief and wickedness, very despicable and reprobate, and also because he was aware of the punishment that should hereafter come upon them—and that the city should be broken down and spoiled, as he told his apostles when they spake to Christ concerning the glory and the beauty of the temple and of the city, and said that it was a magnificent and beautiful work. The Lord then answered them, and said : 'Lo ! ye now see all the beauties of these buildings ; verily, I say unto you, that it shall come to pass for this people's sins and transgressions, that all these buildings shall be cast to the ground, and here shall not be left stone upon stone that shall not be cast down from each other.' So it afterwards happened, forty years after they hanged Christ on the Rood and he suffered bodily death for men's salvation. For forty winters he ever awaited, through his great forbearance, that they would yet turn, or show some sorrow and amendment for the great sin and wickedness that they had committed against their Lord, and also against many of his saints. But when he saw that they would not show any amendment nor sorrow, but continued nevertheless in their sins, then the Lord sent upon them more vengeance than any other that ever before happened, except upon the people of Sodom alone. And that was when Titus came with the Roman army, and took vengeance upon them because they had crucified their king. Then the people fled when they knew the army was about to come into the city of Jerusalem. Then the emperor Titus surrounded the city without with his army, and long encamped there, till they who were in the city died of hunger; and on account of the famine they were not able to defend the city. But the emperor then destroyed the city, and slew the most part of the people. Of all those who were slain there, and died of hunger, with women and men, the number was eleven hundred thousand, and then they also took, of those of the people that remained and best pleased them, a hundred thousand, and led them with them into captivity. And eighteen hundred thousand they sent away, and sold them for money into distant regions. The number of all the people which the emperor Titus encompassed in Jerusalem was thirty hundred thousand, and on account of the vengeance of God he brought all to ruin, and disposed of the land as they (the Romans) themselves would. The punishment was as great as God's forbearance had previously been. The Lord said to his disciples, 'Ye shall find an ass and her foal bound, bring it to me.' What denoteth the ass upon which the Lord Christ would sit but the believing Jewish folk, and also many others who are subjected to God in good will, and therefore are worthy to bear the King of heaven in their hearts, and he will direct them to all good things and will bring them into the 'sight of peace;' for the name of the city which is called Jerusalem signifies 'sight of peace,' because the holy souls rest there. He said that his disciples did as he bade them. Truly that denoteth that the instructors must not take away from nor add to God's laws, but keep them as God himself has appointed. The teachers must mortify their own bodies by abstinence, and set an example of good life to those that succeed them, and prepare the way of the Lord for their minds. What betokeneth the crowd that went before Jesus but the Jewish people, among whom were the holy host of patriarchs and prophets that knew and prophesied of Christ's advent, of the marvels that he wrought, of his passion, resurrection, and ascension. They all cried out, and said, with one voice, 'Jesus, Son of David, blessed art thou who didst come in the name of the Lord. Save us in the highest!' The multitude that followed after betokeneth all those who, after Christ's coming, were converted to God. Now, then, all believers who love and believe in him, ought to cry with pure hearts and with sincere prayers, and in the teaching of holy writ. They said, 'Salvation to us in the highest,' even as if they had plainly said, 'Save us on earth, thou that hast Divine power in heaven.' We must also understand that they said, 'Save us on earth; we who are living in the body, and also those who are in hell, beseech of thee deliverance and salvation, and have done so from the beginning of the world.' And very proper was it both that the people, who went before, and who followed after, should say, 'Blessed art thou that comest in the name of the Lord,' because there was one belief and one hope in the Holy Trinity before Christ's advent; and accordingly we rightly sing in his praise, 'Save us in the highest.' All the arrangement was completed in the true incarnation for the perfection of the heavenly kingdom. The holy men, before Christ's coming, believed in him, and loved him, and spake of his coming; and by his passion they were redeemed from hell-torment, and were saved through his resurrection. We, then, are those who come after, and we know all this that has thus come to pass, wherefore we must believe on him, and love him, and we also know that he will come to judge and put an end to this

EASTER DAY.

Dearest men, this paschal festival presents to us a manifest token of the eternal life, as we may now hear related, so that none may need doubt that the event shall happen at this present season, when the same Creator will sit upon his judgment seat, and before him shall be present all angel-kind and mankind, and also accursed spirits; and there shall be investigated each man's deeds. And he who is now humble, and with all his mind mindful of Christ's passion and of his resurrection, shall receive a heavenly reward. And he who neglects to observe God's behests, or to bear at all in mind our Lord's meekness, shall hear a severe sentence and afterwards shall dwell in eternal torments, of which there shall be never any end. Then is this time of all times, the highest and most sacred: and at this time we should have divine and worldly bliss, because for our example the Lord arose from the dead after his passion, after the bonds of his death, and after the bonds of hell's darkness; and he laid upon the prince of devils eternal torment and vengeance, and delivered mankind, as the prophet David prophesied of this period, thus saying, 'Our Lord delivered us' and hath fulfilled what he had long threatened the accursed spirits; and he hath made known to men at this present time all the things that were ever before prophesied by the prophets concerning his passion, his resurrection, and his harrowing of hell, and concerning his many miracles which were previously foretold. All that he hath fulfilled. Let us now hear and consider what he did, and by what means he made us free. He was not by any necessity compelled, but of his own will descended upon earth, and here suffered many afflictions and sorrows from the Jews and the wicked scribes ; and then at last he permitted his body to be fastened with nails to the cross, and suffered death for us, because he would give us everlasting life ; and then he sent his glorious spirit into the abyss of hell and there bound and humbled the prince of all darkness and of eternal death, and exceedingly troubled all his confederates, and brake in pieces hell-gates and their iron bolts, and from thence brought out all his elect ; and he overcame the darkness of the devil's with his shining light. They were then exceedingly terrified and exclaimed, thus saying, Whence is this man thus strong, thus glorious, and thus terrible ? The world was long previously subject to us, and death yielded to us much tribute. Never before has it happened to us that death has thus been put an end to, nor ever before has such terror befallen to us and to hell. Oh, now, who is this that fearless enters our confines, and not only does not dread punishment from us but will also release others from our bonds ? Think we this be he whom we thought that through his death all the world should be subject to us ? Hearest thou, our chief ? This is the same for whose death thou hast long striven. And thou didst promise us with thy support much spoil at last. But how wilt thou now do with respect to him ? and how mayest thou now overthrow him ? Now he hath put all thy darkness to flight through his brightness, and hath broken all thy prison in pieces ; and all those whom thou previously heldest captive he hath set free, and their life he hath turned to joy ; and those now mock us who previously sighed under our bonds. Why bringest thou hither this man who by his coming hath turned all his chosen to their ancient bliss ? Though they were previously despairing of eternal life, they are now very joyful. There is now no weeping nor lamentation heard here, as was previously wont to be, in this place of torment. Oh, now, our chief, those riches that thou obtainedst in the beginning through the boldness and the disobedience of the first man and the forfeiture of Paradise—all those he hath now seized, and through Christ's cross all thy bliss is turned to grief. When thou didst wish what thou didst know (should come to pass), that Christ should be crucified, thou didst not know how many troubles at his death should come upon us all. Thou wouldst ever defile him, in whom thou didst know there was no sin.

Wherefore broughtest thou hither this free and innocent man? Now by his coming hither he hath condemned and humiliated all the guilty. Then immediately after, the impious voice of hell's host was heard, and their lamentation. Then it happened without any delay that, on account of the coming of the Lord's kingdom, that all the iron bolts of hell's locks were broken; and forthwith the innumerable host of sanctified souls who previously were held captive did obeisance to the Saviour, and with weeping supplication prayed to him, thus saying: 'Thou didst come to us as the redeemer of the world. Thou didst come to us—the hope of heaven and earth's hosts, and also our hope—for of yore the prophets foretold thy coming, and we hoped and trusted in thy coming hither; thou didst give on earth forgiveness of sins to men. Set us free from hell's power and from hell's bondage. Now, since for us thou didst descend into hell's abyss, leave us not now to dwell in torment when thou turnest to thy kingdom on high. Thou didst set the sign of thy glory in the world, set now the token of thy glory in hell.' Without delay this prayer was at once heard, and immediately the innumerable host of holy souls, at the Lord's bidding, were raised out of the fiery sulphur, and He felled down the old devil and cast him bound into hell's abyss. Then the holy souls with ineffable joy cried to the Lord, thus saying: 'Ascend up now, Lord Jesus Christ, now thou hast spoiled hell, and hast bound the prince of death in these torments; manifest now bliss to the world that all thy chosen may rejoice and trust in thy ascension.' Adam and Eve, as yet, had not been set free, but were held in bonds; Adam then with weeping and with piteous voice cried to the Lord, and said, 'Have mercy upon me, O Lord, have mercy upon me, for thy great mercy, and blot out my unrighteousness, because I have sinned against thee alone and have done great sin before thee. I have erred as the sheep that perishes. Visit now thy servant, O Lord, for thy hands have made and fashioned me; leave not my soul with hell's hosts, but show thy mercy upon me, and bring me out of these bonds, and from this prison-house, and from the shadow of death.' The Lord Jesus then had mercy upon Adam, and at once his bonds were unloosed, and having embraced the Saviour's knees

Adam and Eve were the last to be released.

he said, 'My soul shall bless the Lord, and all that is within me shall bless his holy name. Thou thyself hast become merciful to all my unrighteousness, thou thyself didst heal my infirmities, and didst deliver my soul from eternal perdition, and didst satisfy my longing with good things.' Eve as yet continued in bonds and in weeping. She said 'Thou, O Lord, art just and thy judgments are right, therefore deservedly I suffer these torments. In Paradise I was in honour and I did not perceive it; I became perverse and like to foolish brutes. But thou Lord, shield of my youth and of me, be not mindful of my folly, nor turn from me thy presence nor thy mercy, and turn not in anger from thy servant. Hear, O gracious God, my voice with which I, poor one, cry unto thee, for my life and my years have been consumed in sorrow and lamentation. Thou knowest my fashioning, that I am dust and ashes, if thou beholdest my unrighteousness. I entreat thee now, Lord, for the sake of thy servant Saint Mary, whom thou hast honoured with heavenly glory. Thou didst fill her womb for nine months with the prize of all the world. Thou knowest that thou, O Lord, didst spring from my daughter, and that her flesh is of my flesh, and her bone of my bones. Have mercy now upon me, Lord, for the honour of her glory. My Creator have mercy upon me, most wretched of all women, and pity me and deliver me from the bonds of this death.' The Lord Jesus then had mercy upon Eve, and immediately her bonds were unloosed. She then cried out, thus saying, 'Let thy name, O Lord, be blessed in the world, because thy mercy is great towards me. Now thou hast delivered my soul from the nether hell.' Then the patriarch Abraham, with all the holy souls that from the beginning of the world had been held captive, cried out with joyful voice and said, 'We confess thee, O Lord, and we praise thee because thou hast delivered us from the author of death, and hast made us joyful through thy coming.' Then the Lord, with the spoil that he had taken from hell, immediately went living from the tomb, raised by his own power, and afterwards clothed himself with his unspotted body, and showed himself to his followers, because he wished to put away every doubt from their hearts. And he also showed the wounds and the scars of the nails to unbelieving men, because he would not that any should be distrustful of his resurrection. And afterwards in the sight of many men he ascended into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God the Father; from whence he was never absent by reason of his divine nature, but was ever there established. Let all believing folk therefore now rejoice and be glad, because Christ's blood was shed for us. Let us all rejoice in the Lord, who celebrate his resurrection, because he diminished nought of his divinity when he took upon him a human body and delivered us out of the devil's power. Now, we hear, dearest men, how manifold things the Lord suffered for us, when he with his blood redeemed us from hell's bondage. Let us therefore consider what recompence we have to offer to him, when he shall recount and say all this at this same time that he shall sit on his judgment seat; when we must with our souls alone make recompence and amends for all things that we have previously done against his commands, or have left undone what we ought to have done. - Let us now consider how much awe shall come upon all creatures at this present time, when the Doom draws near; and the manifestation of the day shall be very terrible to all creatures. On that day heaven, earth, and sea, and all things that are therein, shall pass away. So also on account of the same event the sun and moon shall pass away, and all the light of the stars shall fail. And the Rood of our Lord, which now puts to flight accursed spirits on the earth, shall be raised in the course of the stars; and on that day heaven shall be rolled up like a book; and on that day earth shall be consumed to ashes, and on that day the sea shall dry up and all the powers of heaven shall be turned and moved. And six days before this day various marvellous tokens shall befall each day. On the first day, at mid-day, a great lamentation of all creatures shall take place, and men shall hear a great noise in heaven as of an army being gathered together and set in array there. Then shall ascend a great bloody cloud from the North and cover all this heaven; and after the cloud shall come lightning and thunder all the day. And in the evening there shall rain a bloody rain. On the following day there shall be heard in the heavens a great sound of the arraying of

Then all folk shall say, ‘The Lord have mercy upon us and pity us, who was praised by means of angels when he was born in Bethlehem:—then they cried and thus spake—“Glory be to God in heaven and to men on earth who are of goodwill.”’ On the third day the earth on the North and East parts will speak to one another, and the deep will rage and will devour the earth; and all the powers of the earth shall be changed, and great earthquakes shall happen on that day. After the third hour on the fourth day there shall be mighty thunders in the heavens; and then shall all idols fall down; and then it shall be at sunset, and yet no light shall appear; and the moon shall be quenched and darkness shall come upon all the world, and the stars all day shall run across our sight. And men may see them (the stars) as plainly as at night when it freezes hard. And then on that day they will hate this world’s weal and the things that they now love. On the fifth day at noon the heaven will burst asunder from the East unto the West quarter; and then all angel-kind shall look through the aperture on mankind. Then shall all men see what it will be at this world’s end. They shall flee then to the mountains and hide themselves, on account of the presence of the angels, and then shall they speak to the earth, and beseech it to swallow them up and hide them; and they will wish that they never were born of father nor mother. So was it of yore prophesied concerning this time in Christ’s books, thus saying, ‘Blessed are those that were barren, and blessed are the wombs that have never brought forth, and the breasts which have never given suck.’ And then shall they say to the hills and to the mountains: ‘Fall upon us, and cover and hide us, that we may no longer endure this horror from these angels. Now is all manifested that we previously had kept secret.’ On the sixth day before the third hour from the Mankind will flee to the mountains, and call upon the hills to hide them.

On the sixth day before noon accursed four ends of the earth all the world shall then be filled with accursed spirits, who will endeavour to take great spoil of men's souls, as Antichrist previously did. And when he cometh then will he threaten to send those souls into eternal punishments who will not obey him. And then at last he himself shall be driven into everlasting woe. So then on that day shall come Saint Michael with a heavenly host of holy spirits, and shall then slay all those accursed folk, and drive them into hell's abyss for their disobeying of God's behests and for their wickednesses. Then shall all creatures see our Lord's power, though mankind now will not acknowledge or recognise it. Then after these things the seventh day will be nigh at hand. And then Saint Michael the Archangel will command the four trumpets to be blown at these four quarters of the earth and will raise up all bodies from the dead, though they were previously hidden by the earth, or drowned in the water, or devoured by wild animals, or carried off by birds, or torn to pieces by fishes, or in any wise departed from this world. All must rise again then, and go forth to the Doom in such form as they previously adorned themselves; but not with gold nor with sumptuous-woven (purple) garments, but with good and holy deeds we must be adorned if we desire then to be on the right hand of the Lord Jesus Christ, along with faithful and chosen souls whom he will send into everlasting light. Wherefore we must now consider, the while we may, our soul's need, lest we lose these opportune times and desire to repent when we are no longer able. Let us be humble and merciful and charitable, and let us put away and banish from our hearts deceit, leasings, and envy, and let us have a right mind towards other men. For God himself shall then take no heed of any man's penitence, and no intercession shall avail us there; but he will then be more relentless and remorseless than any wild beast, or than any anger might ever be. And as much as man's might was the greater and he was the richer in this world, so much the more then shall the supreme Judge require from him, since he himself shall merit and obtain relentless and harsh justice, as it is written concerning such, 'The man who now judgeth the poor without mercy shall hereafter be doomed to stern justice.' VIII.

SOUL'S NEED.

. to God and increaseth his own sins. And there is much need for us to bear in mind how the Lord delivered us, by his passion, from the devil's power, when he ascended the rood-tree and shed his precious blood for our salvation. Wherefore we ought to honour the holy victory-sign of Christ's cross and follow after it and pray for the forgiveness of our sins, all together; since he suffered for us all on the cross, and endured at the hands of the wicked Jewish people all those sore reproaches and hard sufferings, all of which he suffered because he would save us from eternal torments, and bring us into eternal bliss. But what is more needful for a man to think of than about his soul's need; and of the day that cometh when he must separate himself from the body, and what guides he shall then have, and whither he shall be led, either to misery or to glory? Thus may we clearly convince ourselves that those things are familiar which we are unable to see. So also this world's wealth abounds to many a man at his death, nevertheless he shall be harassed and solicitous when the day comes when he must depart empty-handed of it all, except he has done aught for God with a good will. Then in this respect it is unlike the eternal life that each man will obtain who will here, with goodwill, observe God's behests; and to him who obtains it shall be given everlasting bliss. It is then needful for us to seek the medicine for our souls, because the Lord is very merciful who hath assured and informed us, saying, 'I desire not the death of a sinner, but I will that he live and turn to God.' Wherefore we must with all mind and might turn to God and truly repent of our evil deeds, then will the Lord give us forgiveness of our sins and eternal life after this world. Humble yourselves under the power of God's hands, then will he deliver you out of all the devil's temptations, for the Lord never despises the humble nor the tenderest heart. Dearest men, consider that ye are frequently toiling and always solicitous about the things wherewith we should fill and adorn our body; but it shall happen, after a few days or a few years, that the same body shall be in the tomb, eaten and devoured by worms. Wherefore we have much more need to trouble ourselves about the need of our soul, which shall be present in heaven before God and his angels. 'I entreat you,' said Saint Augustine, 'that ye go to the tomb of rich men, and then may you see a plain example [of the vanity of riches].' They were wealthy in this world, and their riches were very many in lands and in vineyards; and their store-houses were filled with manifold riches, and their bliss and their amusements were very abundant. Behold now diligently that all is gone from their eyes. They had many adornments of precious garments. They had also wives and concubines, and their lustful indulgences, and feasts, and sports, and excessive drinkings, and foolish and thoughtless embraces. And diverse blisses they had in their drinkings, and their morning and evening feasts they mingled together. But whither have gone the wealth, and the adornments, or the vain pleasures? or whither have gone the great throngs that encompassed and surrounded them? And where are those who praised them, and spake to them flattering words? And where have gone the adorning of their houses, and the collection of precious gems, or the vast acquisition of gold and of silver, or all the wealth which they daily, more and more, amassed, and knew not nor took heed of the time when they should leave all? Or where have gone their wisdom and their ingenious skill? And [where is] he who hath given false judgments? And where is the splendour of their beds and their couches, or the manifold dissembling of their friends, and the great multitude of their servants, and the fretwork of their lamps which burned before them, and all the great crowds that went with and thronged about them? All those are now gone from their eyes. And above all this be mindful that never again shall they come hither, but their bodies shall lie in the earth and turn to dust ; and the flesh shall become corrupt, and with worms shall swarm, and down shall pour, and they shall issue from all their joints ; and there nought else shall continue, save only he who is happy may teach himself by this example, and also, what is more, [perceive] that they must after these riches suffer hell-torment, except true penitence succour them. Wherefore, dearest men, let us truly repent and amend our sins, the while we are in this life ; let us redeem our souls the while we have life and price at our command, lest that death come and we lose at once life and price, and be then led with our enemies into eternal perdition. No man need think that another man may release him from eternal torments, if he himself will not turn to repentance of his sins before the end of his life. Wherefore we must be now mindful of our soul's need the while we may, for each man must, in this world, merit that the good that his friends do for him afterwards may conduce to eternal rewards. The true man must give his goods at the time that it best pleases him to enjoy them ; and that which a man does for God must be done, then, with very good will, then shall those good things be pleasing to God which are done for him afterwards ; and the Lord will very joyfully requite the man for all those good things with the twofold reward of eternal life. We may also consider, what is more important, that a man may earn disgrace for himself by means of his sins and wickedness, while with good and just deeds he may obtain eternal rest after this world. Then must we ever be mindful of the awful Doomsday, which now cometh unexpectedly ; and we shall then stand before the throne of God, and each man shall produce both the good and the evil that he previously did, and shall then receive reward according to his own deserts. Therefore ought we now to bear in mind our necessity and think sufficiently of our soul's need, lest our death become a cause of rejoicing to our enemies. Let us, [dearest] men, now merit it, that our last day may be angel's joy, and that the heavenly bliss may receive us. Let us turn now to the Lord's will, because he very mercifully hath invited us, thus saying, 'Turn to me, then will I turn to you.' He turned to us when he came hither from his father's realm and divested himself of the divine majesty and invested himself humbly with human frailty. When he saw that all mankind had forsaken their Creator through diverse errors, he did not despise them, he knew that they were liable to death. Then he invited them to come to eternal life, and gave us an example of all humility in the manifold miracles that he wrought; and he showed us the greatest love and mercy, when he suffered bodily death and redeemed all mankind, both those who were previously God's chosen ones, of yore in hell, and who ever trusted in him, and wished and longed for his coming, that he should release them from the confined darkness; and also at his passion he delivered us from the devil's power. No man then need visit the deep abyss of the hot and the severe flame except those, who of their own accord, heedlessly forsake God's behests. Lo we now have heard related a little concerning the humility and mercy (of God), and, nevertheless, no man may relate the mercies and the love that he hath shown to mankind; and he asks of us no other recompence but that we should return our bodies and our souls to him on Doomsday, as undefiled as he previously formed them and entrusted them to us. Wherefore we must now, the while we are abiding in this world, be very mindful of God's biddings and of our soul's need, and at all times thank him for all his mercies and his humility and his gifts that he hath given us, and we must honour his name with words and with deeds, and serve him with all our might; then will he allow us to behold for ever in peace his glorious countenance, as He Himself hath said, 'I am the life of this world, he who follows me shall not go into darkness, but he shall have the light of everlasting life;' that is, the glorious life, wherein angels, and archangels, and patriarchs, and prophets, and all the sanctified abide in the presence of the Lord, where is eternal joy without sadness, and youth without age; where is no grief nor toil, nor any uneasiness, nor sorrow, nor weeping, nor hunger, nor thirst, nor ache nor ill;—where no man

CHRIST THE GOLDEN-BLOSSOM.

Dearest men, we have often heard tell of the noble advent of our Lord, how he himself in this world undertook to make intercession [for us], which patriarchs said and made known, which prophets foretold and extolled, which psalmists sang and declared that he would come from the throne of his glorious realm hither into this world, and would possess for himself all these kingdoms as his own possession. All that was fulfilled after that the heavens opened and the supreme power descended upon this earth, and the Holy Ghost dwelt in the noble womb, and in the best bosom, and in the choice treasury ; and in the holy bosom he abode nine months. Then the queen of all virgins gave birth to the true Creator and Comforter of all people, the Saviour of all the world, the Preserver of all spirits, and the Helper of all souls, when the 'golden-blossom' came into this world, and received a human body from the immaculate virgin St. Mary. Through that issue we were saved, and through that birth we were redeemed, and through that union we were freed from devils' tribute, and through that advent we were honoured and enriched and endowed. And afterwards the Lord Christ dwelt here in the world along with men, and showed them many miracles which he wrought before them ; and he would kindly heal them and teach them mercy. Their hearts were stony and blind so that they could not comprehend what they heard there, nor were they able to understand what they saw there ; but then the Almighty God removed for them that hurtful covering from their hearts and illumined them with enlightened understanding, so that they might understand and know him who descended into this world for

THE END OF THIS WORLD IS NEAR.

Dearest men, lo! I now admonish and exhort every man, both men and women, both young and old, both wise and unwise, both rich and poor,—everyone to behold and understand himself and, whatsoever he hath committed in great sins or in venial ones, forthwith to turn to the better and to the true medicine, then may we have God Almighty merciful (to us), because the Lord desires all men to be whole and sound, and to turn to the true knowledge, as David said, ‘The humble and fearing and trembling and quaking hearts and those fearing their Creator, God will never despise nor disregard, but will hear their prayers when they cry to him and pray to him for mercy.’ May we then now see and know and very readily understand that the end of this world is very nigh; and many calamities have appeared and men’s crimes and woes are greatly multiplied; and we from day to day hear of monstrous plagues and strange deaths throughout the country, that have come upon men, and we often perceive that nation riseth against nation, and we see unfortunate wars caused by iniquitous deeds; and we hear very frequently of the death of men of rank whose life was dear to men, and whose life appeared fair and beautiful and pleasant; so we are also informed of various diseases in many places of the world, and of increasing famines.

All men are here admonished to repent and seek the soul's medicine.

* p. 128.

The end of this world is nigh, as is clear by various signs.

^a Breaks off here, a leaf or leaves being lost. The words that follow may be the end of this homily or of some other.

And many evils, we learn, are here in this life become general, and flourish, and no good is abiding here, and all worldly things are very sinful, and very greatly cooleth the love that we ought to have to our Lord ; and those good works that we should observe for our soul's health, we forsake. These tokens, that I have just related concerning this world's tribulations and calamities, are such as Christ himself mentioned to his disciples, that all these things should happen before the end of this world. Let us now strive with all the might of good works and be desirous of God's mercy. Now we may perceive that this world's destruction approacheth, wherefore I admonish and warn every man to contemplate diligently his own death, so that he may live here in the world rightly, before God and in the sight of the highest King. Let us be liberal to the needy and charitable to the poor, as God himself hath bidden us, so that we observe true peace and have concord among us ; and let those that have children instruct them in right discipline and teach them the way of life, and the right way to heaven ; and if they in any way live their life amiss let them then at once be converted from their wickednesses and turned from their unrighteousness ; that we thereby may all please God, as is bidden to all believing people, and not to those alone that are in exalted positions subject to God, as bishops, kings, mass-priests, archdeacons, but is also indeed enjoined upon subdeacons and monks ; and to all men it is needful and profitable to observe well their baptismal vows. Let no man be very highminded on account of his worldly wealth, nor too confident in his bodily powers, nor too disposed to malice, nor too bold in wickedness, nor too full of crafts, nor too fond of guile, neither given to contriving false accusations, nor to laying snares [for the unwary]. No man need think that his body may or can amend the sin-burden in the grave ; but therein he shall rot to dust and there await the great event [the Doom], when the Almighty will bring this world to an end, and when he will draw out his fiery sword and smite all this world through and pierce the bodies, and cleave asunder this earth ; and the dead shall stand up, then shall the body (flesh-garb) be as transparent as glass, nought of its nakedness may be concealed. Wherefore it is needful for us that we follow not too long foolish works, but we must make our peace with God and men, and establish firmly the right belief in our hearts, that it may there dwell and there grow and bloom ; and we must confess the true belief in [God and in] our Lord Jesus Christ, his begotten Son, and in the Holy Ghost, who is co-eternal with the Father and Son. And we must trust in God's holy Church, and in those that have right belief ; and we must believe in the forgiveness of sins and the resurrection of the body on Doomsday, and we must believe in the everlasting life, and in the heavenly kingdom that is promised to all that are now workers of what is good. This is the right faith, which it behoveth that each man should well hold and perform, for no worker may perform good works before God without love and belief. And it is very needful for us to consider and bear this in mind, and most diligently when we hear God's books explained and read to us, and the gospel declared, and his glories made known to men. Let us then diligently strive to be afterwards the better and the happier for the teaching that we have often heard. Oh ! dearest men, we must remember not to love too much that which we ought to give up, nor yet to give up too easily what we ought to hold everlastingly. Let us consider too very attentively that no man in the world hath so much weal, or such magnificent riches here in the world, but that he shall in a brief interval come to an end ; and he shall give up all that here, previously, in the world was pleasant and dear to him to possess and to hold ; and be the man ever so dear to his kinsmen and world's friends, and let any of them love him ever so much, nevertheless he shall soon afterwards shun him when that the body and the spirit shall be separated, and he shall esteem his fellowship loathsome and foul. That is no marvel ; for, behold ! what else is the flesh after the eternal portion, that is the soul, goes away,—lo ! what else is the remnant, but the food of worms ? Where shall be then his riches and his feasts ? Where shall be then his pride and his arrogance ? Where shall be then his vain garments ? Where shall be then the ornaments and the expensive attire with which he previously decked his body? Where shall be then his will and his lusts that he followed here in the world? Behold, then must he with his soul alone atone to God Almighty for all that he here in this world wickedly committed. We may now hear related a story of a certain rich and influential man, who possessed in this world great wealth and very splendid and manifold treasures, and lived a pleasant life. Then it happened that he died, and there came to him a sudden end of this transitory life. There was then one of his kinsmen and earthly friends that loved him more than any other man; and on account of the longing (grief) and the sorrow caused by the other's death he could no longer stay in the country, but with a sorrowful mind departed from his native land and from his dwelling-place, and in that [foreign] land dwelt many years; and this longing of his never diminished, but much oppressed and afflicted him. Then after a time he began to long for his native land again, for he wished to behold again the tomb and to see what he were like whom formerly he had often seen beautiful in face and stature. . . . Then the bones of the dead man called to him, and thus said, 'Why hast thou come hither to see us? Now mayest thou see here a portion of dust, and the relict of worms, where thou previously didst see a purple garment interwoven with gold. Behold now dust and dry bones, where thou before didst see limbs, after flesh's kind, fair to look upon. O my friend and kinsman, be mindful of this, and convince thyself that thou art now what I was formerly, and after a time thou shalt be what I now am. Remember this, and know that my riches that I had of yore are all vanished and come to nought, and my dwellings are decayed and perished. But turn thee to thyself and incline thy heart to counsel [i. e. listen to good advice], and merit that thy prayers be acceptable to God Almighty.' He then, so sad and sorrowful, departed from the 'dust-spectacle' (contemplation of the dust), and turned himself away from all the affairs of this world; and he began to learn and to teach the praise of God, and to love spiritual virtues, and thereby earned for himself the grace of the Holy Spirit; and he delivered also the other's soul from punishment and released him from torments. May we then, dearest men, have this for our mementoes and set fast this example in our hearts, so that we love not worldly splendour, nor this world itself, too much ; for this world is altogether decrepit, troublous, corruptible, and unstable. And this world is altogether transitory. Let us, then, diligently consider and know in regard to this world's commencement, that when it was first formed it was full of all beauty, and was blooming in itself with manifold pleasures ; and in that time it was pleasant and healthful to men upon earth, and there was upon the earth entire serenity, unbounded concord, and splendid progeny ; and this world was so fair and so delightful that it drew men to it, by its beauty and pleasantness, from Almighty God. And when it (world) was thus fair and thus winsome, it withered away in the hearts of Christ's holy people, and is now blooming in our hearts, as is fit. Now there is lamentation and weeping on all sides ; now is mourning everywhere, and breach of peace ; now is everywhere evil, and slaughter ; and everywhere this world fleeth from us with great bitterness, and we follow it, as it flies from us, and love it although it is passing away. Lo ! we may hereby perceive that this world is illusory and transitory. Let us then be mindful of this the while we may, so that we may diligently press on to what is good ; let us obey our Lord diligently, and for all his gifts and for all his mercies, and for all his kindness and benefits that he hath ever showed to us let us give thanks to Him—the heavenly King that liveth and reigneth everlastingly, for ever without end, in eternity. Amen.

At this holy season our Lord ascended into heaven.

to the abode of his Father, from which, by reason of his eternal Godhead he has never departed. We have also, previously, at this holy season heard tell of our Lord's holy passion, and also of his marvellous resurrection, which took place afterwards on the third day. We must now in a few words tell you of this holy ascension of the Lord, which we now at this present time are celebrating. St. Luke the Evangelist speaks concerning it, and in these words thus saith, 'Igitur qui convenerant, interrogabant eum, dicentes: Domine, si in tempore hoc restitues regnum Israël?' The holy and believing men, who came to our Lord when he was about to ascend to heaven, questioned and asked him, thus saying, 'Lord, wilt thou now at this time establish the kingdom, of the people of Israel?' The Lord Christ previously appeared to his holy people after his resurrection, and spake to them and said things concerning God's kingdom, and gave them the promise of the Holy Ghost's future coming; but as yet the holy men were not so confirmed with the divine spirit, as they were ten days afterwards, but they supposed that soon after Christ's passion the kingdom of Israel should become established here on earth, great, lasting, and blessed. Wherefore they asked him then whether he would establish that kingdom here upon earth now, or at the world's end on Doomsday. They asked concerning a greater matter than it might be in any man's power here on earth to be able to know. Then answered the Lord, and declared it unto them, thus saying, 'Non est vestrum nosse tempora vel momenta, quæ Pater posuit in sua potestate.' 'It is not yours to know the times and the seasons that the Father hath put in his own power.' We learn that the time is so secret that no man in this world, be he ever so holy, nor even any in heaven, has ever known when our Lord shall decree this world's end on Doomsday, except our Lord alone. Nevertheless we know that it is not far off, because all the signs and fore-tokens that our Lord previously said would come before Doomsday, are all gone by, except one alone, that is, the accursed stranger, Antichrist, who, as yet, has not come hither upon earth. Yet the time is not far distant when that shall also come to pass; because this earth must of necessity come to an end in this age which is now present, for five of the [fore-tokens] have come to pass in this age; wherefore this world must come to an end, and of this the greatest portion [already] has elapsed, even nine hundred and seventy-one years, in this (very) year. These [ages] were not all alike long, but in these were three thousand years, in some less in others more. Since there is no man who may know in how long a time our Lord will complete this [age], whether this thousand shall be shorter or longer than that, therefore is it wholly unknown to every one except our Lord alone. When that our Lord said to his holy people that it was beyond their power to know when he would ordain the end of this world, then he said unto them, 'Sed accipietis virtutem supervenientis Spiritus Sancti in vos.' 'But ye shall receive the power of the Holy Spirit which shall come upon you.' Lo we know and learn that he on the tenth day sent them the Holy Spirit from heaven, with which they were afterwards confirmed, in this holy season which will be (celebrated) a week hence this next Sunday. And, afterwards, they disregarded all worldly sorrows and all threatenings, and were not afraid of them; because that they were inwardly so greatly animated with the fear and love of the Almighty Lord through the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, that they disregarded all worldly torments and all bodily pain. No earthly kings were able to overcome or break down their loftiness of mind. Then said he, 'Et eritis mihi testes in Jerusalem, et in omni Judæa, et Samaria, et usque ad ultimam terræ.' He said, 'And ye shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and Samaria, and in the uttermost confines of the earth.' Of what should those holy ones be witnesses for our Lord? except that they should make known to mankind and declare throughout this world—first, that our Lord performed what he promised and declared, on account of his holy future coming, for the comfort of mankind—that he himself would visit us here in the world with love and with humility, in a human body; and then also to relate to men his teaching and his words that they had heard from his own mouth; and to make known to mankind the examples they had witnessed in his works; and also his holy passion and his glorious resurrection afterwards on the Lord's Day, and the holy ascension into heaven, which took place at this holy season. What they had all seen with their own eyes, and heard with their own ears, of all this they were to be witnesses for our Lord, and were to proclaim and declare it throughout the world, as it became known that they subsequently did unremittingly. So we learn that soon after the Lord ascended into heaven, and they were confirmed with the Holy Spirit, thereupon they divided this world by lot into twelve portions, and each of them went to the quarter allotted him, so that he through God's grace gained many a nation for our Lord by his teaching. 'Et cum hæc dixisset, videntibus illis, elevatus est: et nubes suscepit eum ab oculis eorum.' The cloud did not make its appearance there, because our Lord had need of the cloud's aid at the Ascension; nor did the cloud raise him up, but he took the cloud before him, since he hath all creatures in his hand, and by his divine power and by his eternal wisdom, according to his purpose (will), he orders and disposes all things. And he, in the cloud, disappeared from their sight and ascended into Heaven, as a sign that from thence in like manner he will on Doomsday again come upon this earth in a cloud, with hosts of angels; and then for all creatures constant in wisdom, he will provide an everlasting kingdom. Cumque intuerentur . . . in albis. As they looked after him unto heaven and saw the Lord ascending, there stood by them two men in white garments, who were the Lord's angels. The white garments of the angels denote the joy of angels and men that then occurred; because those that were ever angels in heaven had greater joy and bliss than they ever before had had, since at this holy season it happened that they saw their Creator (and the true King, Almighty God, of all creatures) exalted to the paternal abode, along with his human nature, from thence by reason of his eternal divinity he has never departed. And their joy and bliss was moreover increased when they became aware that their home in heaven should thereafter be inhabited and peopled by holy souls; and that the holy seat, from which the devil had previously been cast out for his pride, should be occupied by mankind. to have a greater number of faithful friends [than he has]. And since this holy season became so especially to angels an occasion for joy and bliss, then indeed may the human race, wholly on account of that, rightly praise and glorify their Creator for the favours and honours which the Almighty Lord at this time bestowed on mankind; and because the ruin and the grievous doom of mankind was abolished, and the sorrowful sentence reversed which our Lord, in his wrath had previously pronounced upon the first man: 'Terra es et in terram ibis.' 'Thou art earth,' he said, 'and thou shall return to earth and again become earth.' The same human nature that he previously in his wrath had so denounced—the same our Lord raised, in himself, above heaven, and above all the company of angels, at this holy season. How was it ever possible for more joy and grace and bliss to happen to angels, or greater honour to men, than happened to them on this day? For that we ought ever unceasingly, with all our heart's might, to give thanks to our Lord. When they were looking up into heaven after our Lord, as I before said, the angels who appeared to them in white raiment said to them, 'Viri Galilaei, quid statis aspicientes in caelum? hic Jesus, qui assumptus est a vobis in caelum, sic veniet, quemadmodum vidistis eum euntem in caelum.' 'Ye Galilean men,' they said, (because they were of the land of Galilee), 'why stand ye here marvelling upon this, and looking toward heaven? This Jesus who has now gone up from you (or been exalted) into heaven shall come again on Doomsday in like manner as ye have now seen him ascending into heaven.' So our Lord shall hereafter come on Doomsday, in a cloud and in the same body with which he has now ascended into heaven. But nevertheless he will then come with much greater awe. For the same Lord that aforetime visited us here in the world with all humility, in a human body, and exhibited to mankind all humility, patience and mercy, the same will hereafter, at the final term of this world, on Doomsday, visit us with all terrors, and will then requite and reward every man according to his own works and deeds; and he will bring his saints and elect with him into his heavenly realm; so also all the devil's men who are now in the world and have committed wicked deeds—all of them he will send, for their works, along with devils into eternal fire. But let us diligently reflect upon that, the while we may and can, and let us amend the sins that we have wrought, and earnestly beseech the Almighty Lord to shield us from those approaching events; and let us fix in our minds the fear and horror of that day; let us remember how the term of this life is unknown to each individual man, both to rich and poor, both to young and old, as also the time which the Lord will grant him here in the world. We see that very frequently to many a man it suddenly befalleth that He cuts him off from this world; wherefore it is very needful for us ever to strive at all times to be prepared, when our Lord will visit each of us. We also learn (dearest) men, that those men say, who have gone thither and returned, that the spot whereon our Lord last stood in the body here in the world, before he ascended into the heavens in his human nature—that it is still at this present day very highly honoured with many divine glories before the eyes of men. We learn too that the place is on the top of Mount Olivet. Moreover there is a large and magnificent church built round about the spot; and its circuit is wrought basket-wise, in the most beautiful and sumptuous manner that men could devise it. Then there are three porches built round the church, and all those very handsomely wrought above and roofed over. But the great church which stands there in the midst is open above and unroofed, because our Lord would that to the eyes of those men who believingly came thither and visited the holy place, the way might always become familiar to look up to heaven, whither they knew that the Lord had bodily ascended. And though the house itself is open overhead and not covered in, as I before said, yet it is ever, by the grace of God, protected above from all bad weathers, so that no rain or tempest is able to enter in. And ever since this house (or the place) was built there no one has ever been able to overlay the footsteps themselves, neither with gold nor silver, nor with any worldly ornaments, but whatsoever any man may lay thereon, the earth itself immediately casts it from her, back into his face, and not for any interval would she have it upon her ; nor would she accept any worldly decoration, since the holy feet of our Lord stood upon her. Wherefore there is built in the large church there, round about the footsteps [an enclosure] somewhat wider than a bushel-basket as high as a man's breast ; it was first made of green copper, now it is ornamented with gold and silver. On the western side there is a moderate-sized door, through which a man's head and shoulders may enter, so that one may do obeisance to the footsteps, and kiss them ; and many men, those who may obtain leave to do it, take the mould from the footsteps, that they may have it for a relic, and thereby many diseases and ailments are cured, when the mould is taken away. And then is that also the most wonderful of all, that the earth is daily removed from the footsteps and taken as a relic widely throughout the earth, as I previously said, and never does a man take so much or so often of the mould, as to be able thereby to make the portion on the footsteps ever the greater [? less], or the footsteps to change into another form ; but they ever remain as entire, and of the same appearance as that in which they were first impressed upon the earth. Our Lord let his holy feet sink into the earth there for a perpetual remembrance to men, when that he after his holy passion would take his human nature into heaven, from whence, by reason of his eternal Godhead he has never departed ; and so now those footsteps are still imprinted upon the earth until this present day, as is plainly manifested by their entirety, and by the manifold marvels of the Creator. Moreover there hangeth, also, placed over the footsteps, a large lamp, that is always filled with oil, as often as is needful, and is ever burning day and night for the honouring of those foot-prints. There are also in the great church built about this spot, eight windows, very large, made of glass, and at each one there hangs a lamp, ever filled with oil and burning all the night ; and very light and bright do these lamps shine each night through the windows, as it is the nature of oil to shine brighter than a wax taper. And not only does the light shine over (illumine) the hill whereupon the church is built, but also the city of Jerusalem which is a mile westward from that spot, so that every night from every quarter of the city the light may be seen shining from the holy place. And it often still happens to many persons, when they see the light shining so brightly at night, that their hearts are thereby, and by God's grace, inwardly admonished ; and the more accurately they understand their own lives, and immediately afterwards have greater sorrow for their sins, when they recollect his great humility, and how willingly he first visited us here in the world, in a human body, and came from his exalted heavenly seat, and how humble he was in the body before men ; and, what was most of all, that of his own will he suffered death for the salvation of all mankind (though no one was able to injure his eternal Godhead), when he was just thirty years old ; and during the fourth part of the time that he was here in the world he, by his teaching, proclaimed and made known to mankind the ways of eternal life ; and how he afterwards, on the third day, arose from the dead, and how he last stood bodily, here upon earth, on this holy place, ere he took his human nature into heaven—then they call to mind all this and are admonished by the light they see shining from the holy place. And often, through that, many men are turned to true amendment, and in the sight of God appear good and meet. And also indeed many heathen unbelieving men often thereby turn to belief in God, when they see how God honoureth the place. And so we may plainly perceive that, since God so inwardly admonisheth their hearts, he desireth to be merciful to them, and to give them remission of their sins. And now, dearest men, although we are not now at the holy place that I have just spoken of, nevertheless we may in these places in which we now are, become good and meet before our Lord if we now in our lifetime do what is true and right ; because every man, in whatever part of the earth he may be, shall through good deeds please God ; and each man shall exalt his good deeds if he shall become good and meet. But let us now strive that this season pass not away from us to no purpose, which our Lord has given us for amendment and

WHIT-SUNDAY.

Dearest men, we have, now not long ago, commemorated and celebrated the great and renowned festival of the Lord's Ascension, ten days before this present day. Let us now commemorate to-day the coming of the Holy Spirit, which was sent from heaven and was promised to the apostles for their consolation, on account of their great longing (grief) at the Lord's departure, and as a pledge of the heavenly kingdom, as we have learned in God's book that the Lord himself said to his disciples, ere he ascended into heaven from whence he has never departed, through the power of his Godhead ; but the exalted majesty of the Godhead was ever present with the angelic hosts, though he dwelt with us for a season ; for the Lord promised his disciples, thus saying, 'I will not leave you without a leader, but I will send you the Paraclete.' And so it was meet that he, who was the Comforter of all just men, should send consolation to his disciples, as we may understand by ourselves when it happeneth to any one that his dearly loved father dies ; are not the children then the sadder, and do not they grieve for those friends ? So did the heavenly Father bear in mind and perceive that his beloved and treasured children were troubled and in great anxiety about him ; then would the Lord comfort them. The Holy Spirit taught them every good thing and prohibited every wicked thing, as the Lord spake to the disciples, in their presence, when he was in the body, thus saying, 'To you shall come the Holy Paraclete, whom the Father will send you in my name, who shall teach you to do all those things that I have foretold you that ye should do after my Ascension.' The Holy Spirit dictated all those things that holy men wrote either under the old or new dispensation. But this day is distinguished by many divine graces—of no less favours than the Lord's Resurrection, and also the gift of the Holy Spirit which was this day sent upon the Apostles; this day also commences and ends every week. Wherefore it is very needful for us, at this present season, my brethren, to urge ourselves on very diligently and meekly to our relics and to our holy prayers, for we know that the day was the beginning of this transitory light, and it shall be the commencement of the everlasting light that shall succeed it. Luke the Evangelist spake in the book entitled 'Acts of the Apostles' concerning this day's celebration. He said when that the day was fully come which is called Pentecost (about fifty days after the announcement of the Resurrection or Easter), all the apostles were abiding in one place, and there came to them a sound that was sent from heaven in the likeness of a wind; that was the sound of the Holy Ghost coming to them; and they were all filled with the gift of the Holy Spirit where they were [assembled] together in their place of prayer. They received the Holy Ghost in their hearts in the form of flames of fire, for it was said that the house was filled with the Holy Spirit. The sound filled the house, and the Holy Ghost filled the holy apostles; and through the Holy Spirit they, with their whole hearts, were burning perpetually with the love of God, so that it was meet that they who in their heart and in their will, were turned to God should be together in one place. It is also said that they were all continuing in an upper room, thence awaiting the Holy Spirit, which at undern time, and in the likeness of a wind, descended upon them. Of that flame (or burning), prophesied David, thus saying, 'He who is the Ruler of wind and of wealth (gold) sendeth forth the wind from his treasure-houses.' That sound of the Holy Ghost was compared to the wind, and was prophesied of by the prophet [David]. Wherefore the holy apostles were filled with 'gospel-lore', and then was their doctrine sown and strewn among the four quarters of the world, as is mentioned in the same treatise. 'Their sound shall go throughout all the world, and their precepts and their words unto the uttermost confines.' We have learned, and it is mentioned in the gospel, that the Holy Spirit descended upon each in the likeness of a dove ; because that he was void of all crimes whom fire should cleanse, therefore the Holy Ghost came upon the disciples of God in the form of flames of fire, and thereby were they set free from all sins, and brought to everlasting life, and that they might also, through that gift, blot out other men's sins, and through the gift of the Holy Spirit's burden encourage them the more easily and pleasantly to bear the great and heavy burden of the excessive longing for their beloved Lord. And, moreover, he would also that they might, through the grace of the Holy Spirit, the more easily and the more firmly withstand and overcome the accursed spirits, and overcome those men whom they should perceive were rebellious against God's commands and the spiritual director's. For he himself said to his disciples, thus saying, 'As my Father hath loved me, so love I you.' The Saviour knew that his disciples would be sad on account of his departure, because he was the beloved teacher and creator of all the world ; and they also saw that the holy heaven-dwellers were obedient to him. Therefore Christ's ministers had such manifold sorrow in their hearts, for they had seen him bodily and in earthly fashion (or after the manner of men) had humbly obeyed him. And they had great longing and sorrow in their hearts when they understood that he would no longer abide bodily with them. He then consoled them with spiritual words on account of the intense sorrow of which they had such great plenitude, and he spake thus [unto them] : 'Ye need not be sad nor troubled in your hearts, for I will intercede for you with the Father, that he may preserve you through his heavenly power.' As soon as they received the heavenly promise and the exceeding great hope of spiritual strength, they abandoned all earthly sorrows and fixed their hearts' intent most firmly upon the heavenly hope ; and that bodily separation [from Christ] was not any trouble to them in their new state. After these words the Saviour said to his disciples I will send the Paraclete ; the meaning of this word is, as is interpreted, Advocate or Comforter. After these words they then received the greatest strength of the heavenly help ; through the reception of the Holy Spirit they were, moreover, so firm and strong that they could accomplish with God's assistance anything they wished ; their paths also were then shining through their lore, and through the gift of the Holy Spirit. And as soon as this gift was put in their hearts, they were so firm and so steadfast that they despised the fear of all earthly kings. Therefore they received the Holy Spirit in their minds, and disregarded the earthly fear, and he gave them the hope of everlasting life. My brethren, we have now heard tell of the celebration of this present day, and also of the gift which was bestowed upon the holy apostles on this present day. Not alone to the apostles was this gift bestowed, but also, indeed, to all mankind was given forgiveness of all sins, and also to all good-doers deliverance from the intolerable thralldom, that is, of the devil's power. To us also is permitted a way of return to everlasting life, and to occupy heaven's kingdom along with all saints and with the Lord himself, to which Lord be praise and glory everlastingly, ever without end, in eternity. Amen.

ASSUMPTION OF THE VIRGIN MARY.

Dearest men, hear now what is here related in these books concerning the holy virgin St. Mary—how it happened unto her at this time. She was watching, and praying day and night, after our Lord's ascension ; then an angel of the Lord came to her and said, ' Arise, Mary, and receive this palm-twig which I have now brought thee ; for assuredly, ere three days [have elapsed] thou shalt be taken from thy body, and all the Lord's apostles shall be sent to bury thee.' Then Mary said to the Angel, ' What is thy name ? ' Then said the angel unto her, ' Wherefore seekest thou my name, for it is great and wonderful ? ' When St. Mary heard this, she ascended the hill called Olivet. And that was of a truth a very shining palm-branch (and it was then as bright as the morning-star) that she had received of the Angel's hand ; and then did she greatly rejoice and with great joy was glorified. And all those who were there saw that the angel, that had previously come to her, ascended to heaven, with a great light. Then Mary again returned to her house and put aside, with all humility, the palm-twig that she had previously received at the angel's hand, and she also laid aside her garment with which she was clothed, and washed her body, and invested herself with the finest garment; and then she rejoiced and exulted exceedingly and blessed God, thus saying, 'Benedico nomen tuum [quoniam magnum] et laudabile in secula seculorum.' 'I will bless thy holy name, because it is great and laudable, world without end. I beseech thee, my Lord, that thou send thy blessing upon me.' Then Mary said, 'when that thou shalt bid me leave my body, do thou then receive my soul.' Then the Angel said, 'Be not sorrowful Mary.' When that she heard this, she invited and called all her kinsfolk who were then near at hand, and thus spake unto them: 'Hear me, now, all; and believe ye all in God the Father Almighty, for to-morrow I am going from my body, and am going to my God; and I pray you all that ye with one accord watch with me until that time, in which day there shall be an end of my toil. And when she had spoken this, forthwith there came the blessed [Peter and Paul] to the door of the holy Mary, and they saw that she was glorified among them; whereupon they greeted her, and said, 'Thanks be to God that we were to-day all in unity and in humbleness. For verily is the prophecy of the prophet David fulfilled which he said, "Ecce quam bonum, et quam jucundum, habitare fratres in unum!" "How good and how pleasant a thing is it for a man to dwell in the unity of the brethren.'" And then spake each of them to the other, saying, 'Let us pray to our Lord that he make known to us that for which he wished us to assemble to-day at this time. light;’ and [he replied], ‘All those that stand around me are better than I am. And thou art a preceptor (or leader) in the prayers of the apostles, and thou art quite full of the grace of the Lord.’ Then all the Apostles rejoiced on account of St. Paul’s humility; and as St. Peter himself had enjoined upon mankind, he then stretched forth his hands to God, and said thus, ‘Domine, Deus omnipotens qui sedes super cherubin &c.’ ‘Lord God Almighty, that sittest above the Cherubim and above the depths of all abysses, to thee we raise our hands in the likeness of thy cross, and in thy friendship we shall have rest; for thou wilt give rest to our members, for they have laboured in thy name; and thou to all haughty ones givest humility and overpowerest death. Thou art, indeed, our rest, and thou Lord art our protector, and we cry to thee, who dwellest in the Son (i.e. the Father) and the Father in thee (i.e. the Son) and thou art one with the Holy Ghost, world without end.’ Then all the apostles answered him and said. ‘Amen!’ Then ran the blessed St. John to all the apostles, and said unto them, ‘Benedicite fratres,’ ‘Bless our Lord, dearest brethren;’ et dixerunt Petrus, &c. . . . Then said St. Peter and Andrew to John, ‘Thou, dear Sir, show us in what way thou camest to us to-day.’ Then said John, ‘Bless the Lord, dearest brethren, and hear ye all . . . that he was passing to-day through this city, and he was informed that ye would be praying to God at the ninth hour of the day. And then suddenly a great cloud came upon the same place wherein we were assembled and where we heard the word of God, and then suddenly all the apostles surrounded the holy Mary and seized her by the waist. And all who were there saw that the blessed Michael came and knocked at the door of the house, and it did not refuse him admittance, but it opened of itself. And he there found a great many people who were standing there; and there also stood the sister of the holy Mary and she spake to the crowd and said, ‘To-morrow she will go from the body.’ And then each of them who heard this began to weep; and then Mary said, 'Nunc fratres audite,' 'Dearest brethren, all of you now hear that to-morrow I shall depart from the body.' Then said the Apostles to her, 'Be not sorrowful, Mary, nor weep, so that thy people be not troubled, for of this spake our Lord and the teacher of our behests, when he was crossing the sea's flood, when he was at his evening meal; wherefore I remind you all of it and also this people that here stand weeping around me.' Then the people began to doubt in their hearts, and said, 'Why dreadeth this holy Mary her death, and God's apostles are with her and others who shall bear her to her resurrection?' Then said the Apostles to the people, 'She shall be much more strengthened among us by God's promise; and let not this people have doubt of her weakness or of her faith.' And when that they had said this, then there came the blessed St. John and entered therein from the house of the holy Mary, and greeted her with a loud voice, thus saying, 'Ave Maria, gratia plena, Dominus tecum.'—'Hail Mary, full of grace! thou art blessed among all womankind, and among all holy spirits.' And she then answered and said, 'Dearest brethren, I pray you all, tell me how came ye all together to-day, or who told you that I must to-morrow go to heaven?' And so each of the apostles is appointed to his separate place, that he should proclaim His divinity and her conception. And the Apostles drew her up and placed her in the beautiful paradise. Then did Mary rejoice in her spirit, and thus said, 'Benedico te qui dominaris super omnem benedictionem.'—'I bless thee, my Lord, thou that art the giver of all blessings; and I bless all thy promises that thou didst promise me. Thou hast, without my entreaty, appointed all the Apostles to be present at my burial; and I bless thy holy name, who dwelleth in eternity, Amen.' Et post hæc vocavit Sancta Maria omnes apostolos in cubiculo suo, et ostendit illis omne indumentum. And after that the holy Mary called all the apostles into her closet, and showed them all her garments, which she desired to have on at her burial; and [he? body [and] from us. And then said the blessed Peter to all the apostles and to all the people, 'Dearest brethren, I entreat you all who are in this place to watch with me, and to burn spiritual lamps, until the Lord come hither.' And then after these words our Lord came there, and found them all unanimously watching, and he illumined them with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and thus said unto them, 'Dearest brethren, have no sorrow because ye see that this blessed Mary is called unto death; for she is not called to earthly death, but she shall be favoured by God, wherefore great glory is prepared for her.' And when he had said this, then there shone suddenly a great light upon her house, so that all the fiends who were there, and those who saw the light, were overpowered, and were unable to speak out, on account of the greatness of the light. And then came a loud voice from heaven to Peter, thus saying, 'I am with you always unto the end of this world.' And then Peter lifted up his voice, and said, 'We bless thy name with (all) our souls, and we beseech thee never to depart from us; and we bless thee and beseech thee to illumine our world, for thou hast mercy upon all those that believe in thee.' And the blessed Peter said this to all the apostles, and he strengthened their hearts with God's belief. After he had finished these words, then Mary arose and went out of her house, and she prayed the prayer that the angel who came to her had enjoined upon her. When this prayer was finished, she returned to her house and rested upon her bed, and at her head sat the blessed Peter, and about the bed other disciples of Christ. And before the sixth hour of the day there suddenly came a loud thundering, and there was a very sweet smell, so that all that were there slept; and the apostles and the three women, whom Christ had commanded to watch without intermission, took charge of the holy Mary, that they should declare the glory of the Lord with respect to her, and all his kindness to the blessed Mary. And while all who were there were sleeping, our Lord Christ suddenly came there
